NEWS FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE NIAGARA'S MAILS.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, from Liverpool on the 31st ult., arrived at Boston yesterday morning, and her mails, dispatched South in the early train, reached this City last evening.

The European journals contain but little news in addition to the telegraphic summary forwarded from Halifax.

Both London and Paris journals just now are very much occupied in discussing the approaching journey of Queen VICTORIA to Cherbourg. But beyond the fact that her Majesty is going to Cherbourg, very little indeed appears to be positively known with respect to the royal visit. We are told that her Majesty will not land at Cherbourg, but be entertained on board the flagship Bretagne. Nevertheless, the people of Paris depart with increasing confidence that the Queen will land, and they say that the Emperor and Empress will try to prevail on her Majesty to prolong her visit beyond the limited period named for its duration. Perhaps the truth is that too Court, oscillating between a desire to gratify its "august ally" and a wish to put offend public opinion at home, scarcely knows what to do, and will end by making the contemplated visit as brief as courtesy will permit.

The Paris correspondent of the Times asserts that Cherbourg is neither a Cronstadt nor a Sebastopol; and, the correspondent of the Globe represents, that the deep soundings immediately outside the long breakwater present no obstacle from the short batteries to the formation, in line or crescent, of a bombarding fleet, the fire of which may be concentrated on the whole contents of the inner basin, the ironclads keeping a safe distance, yet within effectual range.

The following is a list of the personages who are to compose the Court accompanying their Majesties in their visit to Cherbourg:

"Marshal VAILLANT, minister of war; Admiral HAMELIN, minister of marine; M. ROUHER, minister of public works; the Princess D'ESSLING, lady of honor to the Empress, and lady of the palace; the Countess DE LEVENEUR, lady of honor to the Empress; General FLEURY, first equerry to the Emperor; General NIEL, aide-de-camp; Colonel LEPIC and the Marquis DE CAUMONT, orderly officers; Baron DE BOURGOING, equerry; the Marquis DE CHAMPEAUX-QUITRE, chamberlain; M. MOCQUARD, private secretary of his Majesty; an aide-de-camp of the Minister of War and one of the Minister of Marine, a secretary of the Minister of Public Works, and two secretaries of his Majesty."

A discussion on the fortifications of Antwerp has been going on in the Belgian Chambers for some days. The Indépendance Belgé says: "The opinion is gaining ground as to the necessity of giving to the national defences a definitive organization, by the creation of a grand strategic pivot, and that this pivot cannot be fixed on any other point than Antwerp."

The London Times, in its City article, declares that "letters from Paris assert that there is some expectation of the Credit Mobilier winding up, or that a fusion will be contrived with the Discount Bank of M. DE ST. PAUL."

Ex-President PERNOT had arrived at Marseilles on his way to Switzerland.

The sentence against M. PROUDHON, the French socialist, has been confirmed, and he is condemned to three years' imprisonment. M. PROUDHON is in Brussels, and it is not expected that he will return to Paris.

A liberal Russian paper, called The Arrow, has been started at Leipsic, by IVAN GOLOVIN, a Russian refugee, and for a long time a resident of New-York.

Some difference of opinion is said to exist between the French and English Governments as to the mode of exacting satisfaction for the massacre at Djidda. The latter are desirous of allowing no time to pass away; the former seem slower in their operations.

The Telegraphe of Brussels says:—"It was stated a few days ago that General TOTTLEBEN, in the course of a discussion relative to the fortifications of Antwerp, had expressed doubts of their efficacy, in the present state of the art of attacking and defending fortified places. We are now able to add, on good authority, that that officer expressed a general opinion contrary to all sorts of fortification, as regards the territorial defence of a country."

ASCOT FOR THE GOODWOOD CUP.

From the London Times, July 30.

The Cup Day was true to its traditions. The weather was warm and sunny, and only now and then was the blue sky overcast by dark clouds. This propitious change in the skyey influences not only produced a perceptible effect upon the number and character of the company, but it rendered the proceedings additionally attractive and enjoyable. In the Grand Stand inclosure were the Duke of CAMBRIDGE, the noble guests of the Duke of RICHMOND, and other patrons of the sport whose names we have frequently recorded among the distinguished visitors to the meeting. To give the list of company present would occupy space to the exclusion of many interesting facts connected with the racing. The raised embankment under the trees was no longer deserted, but it was occupied by a store of ladies, whose elegant and varied toilets were, as usual, foremost in the attractive sights of the day. Among the most curious and eager spectators were several foreigners, who entered with an ardor into the pursuit of sport which fairly outdid our own countrymen, who are, as it were, "to the manner born." The first race was appointed for 1 o'clock, but Star of the East walked over for it, and thus active business did not commence until half an hour later. Rainbow won the Memorial Stakes for two-year-olds; but his achievement evidently did not place the cognoscenti, and did not improve his position in the Derby betting. Before the race 30 to 1 was taken about him for the Derby; after it, 25 to 1 was offered. Merryman beat Cynricus, and restored a reputation which his defeat on Tuesday somewhat damaged.

The Cup commanded eight starters, among whom were Vendre St. Grix, the representative of the French turf; and Charleston, the champion of America. The French horse was made an immense favorite, and it was supposed that if he possessed any pretentions to racing merits, his light weight would enable him to come through in triumph. As our return and description of the race will show, two English horses made a terrible example, not only of the "foreigners," but of their native opponents. Saunterer won in a style which indicated that his last year's form was correct, and that his running early in the current season had been "all a mistake." Fisherman, who is as well known in every county in England as a Judge of Assize, ran with wonderful gameness under his crushing weight, and still further extended that vast reputation which his many triumphs have established.

In place of the conventional "cup," Mr. C. F. HANCOCK, of Bruton-street, substituted two large massive silver tankards, a novelty in race prizes, which excited much curiosity and admiration. The ornamental and the useful were never more tastefully combined. These tankards, each of which is upwards of a foot and a half in height and of commensurate circumference, are exquisitely chased. The subject of one of them is the victory of ALEXANDER the Great over DARIUS at the battle of Arbela, described by the historian QUINTUS CURTIUS, painted by LE BRUN, and now produced in silver by Mr. HANCOCK. The subject of the other is the battle of Zama, in which HANNIBAL was defeated by SCIPIO and the Roman Republic saved; also after LE BRUN'S picture in the Louvre. Mr. HANCOCK also exhibited the Emperor NAPOLEON'S cup for the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta. It is an elaborately wrought massive silver casket. The lid is surmounted by a group representing a lion hunt for Algeria, and the sides are richly embossed. It excited much deserved praise, and, as a work of art, it cannot be too highly commended, whether for its design or execution.

The Goodwood Cup, value 300 sovs., the rest in specie, by subscription of 20 sovs., with 100 added. The second to receive 100 sovs. out of the stakes, and the third 50 sovs. Two miles and a half. 33 subs.

THE RACE.

Vendre St. Grix and Sedbury raced for the lead, and soon placed a wide interval between themselves and their pursuers, at the head of whom were Saunterer and Rumation. On quitting the straight the first two were upwards of a dozen lengths a head, Rumation going on third, with Arsenal and Saunterer next, Charleston, who had occupied a forward place up to that point, dropping nearly a hundred yards astern of everything. They rounded the clump without changing their positions, but immediately afterwards the advanced four closed up, and when they reappeared in sight Saunterer was seen with the lead, Fisherman occupying the second place, with Vendre St. Grix third, and Sedbury fourth. Next in pursuit, and far behind them, were Schiedam and Arsenal. On descending the hill Vendre St. Grix went up to Fisherman's quarters, but was shaken off in the bottom, whence the race was confined to the first, then Fisherman made a game effort to reach Saunterer, but failed, and was beaten by a length. Nearly a dozen lengths off, Schiedam was third, Vendre St. Grix was about ten lengths behind him, and far in the rear the others finished in the order enumerated above. Time, 5 minutes 3 seconds.

Betting—7 to 4 on North Lincoln; 100 to 20 against Promised Land; 10 to 1 against Rainbow; 20 to 1 against any other.

Nuncia led, with North Lincoln, Brother to Chanonneuse, and Promised Land well laid up. At the bottom of the hill Brother to Chanonneuse declined, and before reaching the distance Nuncia gave way. Promised Land then headed North Lincoln, and the result was from that time placed beyond a doubt, Promised Land running home the winner by two lengths; same distance between the second and third. The others finished nearly a dozen lengths behind the third.

Interesting from China—Official Account of the Capture of the Pei-ho Forts.

A dispatch, of which the following is an extract, has been received by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty from Rear-Admiral Sir MICHAEL SEYMOUR, K. C. B., the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's ships and vessels on the East India station, dated the 21st of May, 1858:

I accordingly lost no time in consulting with Rear-Admiral RIGAULT DE GENOUILLY, and making the necessary arrangements, and the same afternoon we proceeded with all the English gunboats across the bar to the mouth of the river, where gun vessels and the French gun-boats named in the margin had been previously stationed, to give weight to the negotiations. The Slaney, Furm, Staunch and Bustard conveyed our landing parties, and the Leven and Opossum those of the French.

From the arrival of the Ambassadors on the 14th of April, the Chinese have used every exertion to strengthen the forts at the entrance of the Pei-ho; earthworks, sandbag batteries, and parapets for the heavy gingalls, have been erected on both sides for a distance of nearly a mile in length, upon which 87 guns in position were visible, and the whole shore had been piled to oppose landing. As the channel is only about 200 yards wide, and runs within 400 yards of the shore, these defences presented a formidable appearance. Two strong mud batteries, mounting respectively 33 and 16 guns, had been also constructed about 1,000 yards up the river, in a position to command our advance. In the rear several entrenched camps were visible, defended by flanking bastions, and it was known that large bodies of troops had arrived from Pekin. All the forts and the camps were covered with the various colored flags under which the "troops of the eight banners," as the Tartar soldiers are styled, range themselves.

At 8 A. M. yesterday, the notification to the Imperial Commissioner, TAN, and the summons to deliver up the forts within two hours, were delivered by Captain HALL, my Flag Captain, and Capitaine RETNAUD, Flag Captain of the French Admiral, and accompanied by my gallant colleague, and attended by our respective secretaries and flag lieutenants, we embarked in the Slaney to direct the movements of the squadron.

I beg to inclose a copy of the plan of attack, which was arranged in concert with Admiral RIGAULT.

No answer having been returned to the summons by 10 o'clock, the signal agreed upon was made and the gunboats advanced in the prescribed order, led by the Cormorant. The Chinese opened fire immediately, and the signal to engage was made a few minutes afterwards from the Slaney. By the time all the vessels had anchored in their respective stations, the effects of our well-directed fire had become very apparent. The first fort was entirely dismantled and abandoned, and the second partially so, while those on the north side had been completely subdued by the Cormorant and two English gunboats At the short range within which we engaged every shot told, and many of the massive embrasures of mud were leveled by shells. At the end of an hour and a quarter the enemy's fire ceased. The landing parties were then pushed on shore, the one for the north forts under the orders of Captain Sir F. NICHOLSON and Captain LEVEQUE, and that for the south forts under Capts. HALL and REYNAUD, Flag Captains, the Royal Marines on each side being commanded by Major ROBERT BOYLE and First-Lieutenant M'CALLUM.

Owing to the destructive fire from the gunboats, but little opposition was made to our landing, and the Chinese troops were observed moving off in masses, while our people were in the boats. The flags of the allied Powers soon replaced those of the Chinese. On the south side 200 large gingalls were found in position near the landing-place, on an embankment.

Having obtained possession, the dismantling of the works was commenced, and field-pieces landed for the protection of the forces against the possible attacks of the Chinese. Shortly after the landing our gallant allies sustained a melancholy and heavy loss of men, killed and wounded, by the accidental explosion of a magazine.

When all the vessels had taken up their positions a bold attempt was made to send down upon them a long array of junks, filled with straw in flames, and drawn across the river; but they fortunately grounded, and though the people guiding them down the river with ropes made great efforts to get them off, a few shells from the Bustard drove them away, and the vessels burnt out without doing any damage.

Much skill and labor had been expended in the construction of these forts. The guns were much better cast, and not so unwieldy as those in the Canton River, and were better equipped in every respect. They had good canister shot, and the hollow 8 inch shot appeared imitations from our own. There were several English guns in the batteries.

Directions were now sent to Captain Sir F. NICHOLSON and Captain LEVEQUE to advance and capture the two forts up the river, which had kept up a smart fire.

This movement was successfully executed, under the supporting fire from the Bustard, Staunch, and Opossum. Several intrenched camps were also destroyed.

The Chinese stood well to their guns, nothwithstanding shot, shell, and rockets were flying thickly around them. Most of the gunboats were hulled, some several times, while boats, spars, and rigging were cut by round shot, grape, and gingall balls. This signal success, after the Chinese had ample time to fortify their position, and were confident of their strength, may probably have a greater moral effect on the Chinese Government than if we had attacked them in the first instance, when they were less prepared.

The necessary arrangements at the entrance of the river having been completed, a further advance was made to the village of Takoo, where we found a barrier of junks filled with combustible matter, moored by chains right across the river, while seven similar obstructions to our progress were observed within a mile higher up. Captain HALL, my Flag-Lieutenant, and a party of men landed, and took possession of 18 field-pieces in front of an abandoned encampment at Takoo. While on shore the residence of the High-Commissioner TAN was visited, and found deserted, though a significant proof of his recent presence was found in a beheaded Chinaman near his gate. It was ascertained here that the main body of the Chinese troops had retired with TAN to a position about eight miles up the river.

The barrier at Takoo offering good security to our vessels below, it was made our advanced position for the night, in charge of Sir F. NICOLSON and Capitaine TRICOU.

I inclose a list of our casualties, amounting to 1 warrant officer and 4 men killed, and 2 officers and 15 men wounded. That of our gallant allies is, I regret to state, much heavier, amounting to 4 officers and 2 men killed, and 5 officers and 58 men wounded. Many of these wounded were taken on board the Coromandel, flag tender, where arrangements had been made for the purpose, under the able supervision of Dr. C. A. ANDERSON, Staff Surgeon, whose services on this occasion, and on all former occasions where we have been employed on active service, I feel bound to bring to their Lordships' favorable notice.

It now becomes my pleasing duty to mention to their Lordships the laudable conduct of both officers and men under my orders. From Captains Sir FREDERICK NICHOLSON, HALL and OSBORN, I have received the greatest assistance, as well as from Commanders LECKIE, SAUMAREZ and CRESWELL. Commander SAUMAREZ excited the admiration of the whole force by the noble manner in which he led the attack and for some time sustained the heavy fire from the north forts.

I can bear witness also to the zeal and gallantry of the officers commanding the gunboats, and beg to recommend Lieutenants HOSKINS, NICOLAS, HUDSON, WILDMAN and HALLOWES to their Lordships' favorable notice; as well as the second masters, particularly Mr. C. PRICKETT, of the Opossum, who has been severely wounded. I also beg strongly to recommend Lieut. A. BLAND, of the Pique, an old and meritorious officer. The names of Lieut. R. P. OATES, of the Calcutta; Lieutenant A. T. THRUPP, of the Nimrod; Lieutenant H. K. LEFT, of the Cormorant; and Lieutenant C. PARRY, of the Surprise, have been also brought to my notice. Commodore SAUMAREZ has brought to my knowledge the gallant conduct of Mr. W. H. FAWCKNER, Master of the Elk, lent from the Hesper, and of Mr. H. H. BURNERON, Paymaster; Mr. WEBSTER, Master's Assistant; and Mr. CAMPBELL, Midshipman of the Cormorant, who worked a 24-pounder howitzer, and kept up a continued fire from that gun on the south forts. I beg to call their Lordships' attention to the list of officers engaged.

Mr. W. D. JEANS, my Secretary, has accompanied me in this, as on other expeditions; also Mr. W. H. M. ARNOLD, chief clerk in my office, whom I would beg to recommend for promotion for his arduous duties during the progress of the operations in China.

In conclusion, I have much gratification in recording the cordial cooperation of my gallant colleague, and of the forces under his command. We have been actuated by the sole desire to carry in to effect the orders of our respective Governments, in a spirit of the most perfect friendship.

Arrangements are making for a further advance up the river towards Tien-tsin.

I have the honor to inclose two sketches of the forts made by Lieutenant A. T. THRUPX, on the Nimrod, and Mr. F. C. B. REDWELL, Secretary's clerk.

I have, &c.,
M. SEYMOUR,
Rear-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.

The Last News from India.

From the London Times.

The gratifying intelligence from India which we publish to-day contrasts brightly with the dubious telegrams and desponding letters which have recently been received. It is true that the recapture of Gwalior by the forces under Sir HUGH ROSE has been known to us for some days, but the details now given show how complete was the rout of the enemy, and lead to the presumption that the moral effect of the victory must have been great and widely spread. It is needless for us to recapitulate the exploits of what was called the Gwalior Contingent. It is sufficient to say that this force has shown a power of cohesion which has been wanting to almost every other hostile body. It received a severe blow from Sir COLIN CAMPBELL at Cawnpore, and suffered further from Sir HUGH ROSE at the capture of Calpee; but it has yet been the nucleus of the army which, on the 2d of June, was strong enough to defeat the Maharajah SCINDIA, and send him a fugitive into the British camp. The rout of SCINDIA'S force might, indeed, be considered a blow to British power. A great chief, perhaps the greatest in Central India, had been driven from his throne on account of his fidelity to British rule. The successful rebels, had, it is said, proclaimed NANA SAHIB, assigned themselves six months' pay, and plundered a part of the city of Gwalior. To punish such outrages was a matter of immediate necessity. Happily this country has in its Indian Generals men whom numbers do not appal and difficulties do not discourage. Although the terrible sun of India was approaching the solstice, and on every side men and animals were sinking under the intolerable heat, the officers in command of the troops in Central India did not hesitate to press on and strike a decisive blow. The battle in which SCINDIA was routed took place on the 2d, and on the 16th Sir H. ROSE reached Gwalior, at the same time that Brigadier SMITH approached it from another quarter. The enemy had consequently but a short time to enjoy their triumph. The strength of the fort of Gwalior has been recently described in these columns, and our readers will consequently be better able to appreciate the skill and courage which were necessary for its recapture from a victorious and elated enemy. On the 17th and 18th of June it would appear that our forces were sharply engaged with the rebels, and on the 19th the latter were totally beaten and dispersed, and the town taken. They then seem to have abandoned the fort in a panic, and it was taken possession of by Sir HUGH ROSE on the 20th. The Maharajah, our ally, was conducted in state to his palace, and it cannot be doubted that such a signal vengeance, followed by an open and visible triumph, must have its due effect throughout Central India. It is of the utmost importance our allies should feel that even if they suffer temporarily for their friendship and allegiance to us, yet the British Government is strong enough to administer fitting punishment to their enemies, and to restore them to all, and more than all, their former authority. It has been said that foundries for casting an indefinite number of guns exist throughout these districts of India; we will not, therefore, dwell on the capture of 27 pieces of artillery; we only trust that the enemy may never be allowed to get such a hold of any of the great seats of native rule as to have at command the means of replacing what they lost in their flight of the 19th of June. The passage in the telegram which speaks of the fugitives as nearly surrounded by our forces seems to promise that we shall speedily hear the last of the band which has given so much trouble to a succession of commanders.

The success of Sir HOPE GRANT, near Lucknow, which is described as a "brilliant victory," requires to be reported in more ample detail before we can venture on any speculations concerning it. It may, however, be observed that the population of Oude, a rustic soldiery, for the most part hostile to us, has furnished for some months past the material for a number of bands—they cannot be called armies—which take the field, ravage the lands of any one suspected of friendship with us, and cut off the communications wherever they are able. The last mail brought news that the country between Lucknow and Cawnpore was infested by these bands, and to-day's dispatch tells us that "Oude continues much disturbed." The enemy over whom Sir HOPE GRANT gained his victory was, no doubt, the rebel force which was said some time since to be menacing Lucknow from the north, and we trust that the capture of their guns, and their expulsion from the country south of the Gogra will rid our people of them until the cool season allows European troops to take the field and finish the war. This is, indeed, the matter of chief importance. No enemy assails us with such fury as the sun; no ally is so much wished for as the cooling rain. We are happy to add that by the last advices rain had fallen in considerable quantities, and the immoderate heat of the weather had been somewhat abated. The army has been subjected to the most severe trials, but it is to be hoped they are now coming to an end. Their patient endurance has equaled the brilliancy of their courage, and with the approach of cooler weather and the arrival of reinforcements, the Commander-in-Chief will be able to act with greater activity and effect. The war is now confined to a very narrow compass; the enemy has been beaten everywhere, and all that we have to do is to disperse a succession of half-disciplined levies which are rather troublesome to our Generals than formidable to the fabric of our power.

Personal.

A letter has been received in Hartford from a young Connecticut mechanic, who left Hartford on the 24th of March last. He was sent out to put up 40 cars built in Springfield, Mass., and sent to Egypt all marked, ready to put together on their arrival. He writes: I am getting along finely with my work. I have six cars finished, and have thirty-four more to do, which will take me about six months. His Highness, the Pasha, is very much pleased with the cars, and he says he shall keep me here to see to them. I may possibly get very high wages.

At the last meeting of the Rhode Island Historical Society, Mr. Horatio G. Jones, of Philadelphia, read a paper claiming for Mr. Benjamin Franklin, an Englishman, who settled in Philadelphia in 1714, the honor of originating the idea of Magnetic Telegraphs.

KANSAS AFFAIRS.

Lecompton Dead—The Free-State Triumph—Territorial Prospects.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

LEAVENWORTH CITY, K. T., Thursday, Aug. 5, 1858.

The long agony is over, and the last spark of vitality, galvanized into the Lecompton Constitution by political quacks, is "crushed out" by the heavy heel of the people. The election passed off very quietly, and the indications are that a heavy vote has been polled. It is generally supposed here from the data received that it will reach 19,000. Allowing for absent voters, and taking into consideration the comparatively long residence required, together with the fact that only full-fledged citizens were allowed to vote, it would seem that we must have almost, if not quite population enough, to warrant us in asking for admission under a Constitution of our own making.

The election brings to light some startling facts in regard to the sad depletion of the great and flourishing city of Kickapoo. Almost every large town has some distinguishing feature—is noted for some branch of manufacture, production or commerce. So with Kickapoo. To the eye of the passing observer, it was a most miserable God-forsaken hamlet; but by the politician, one who knows its resources, it was regarded as one of the best and most reliable towns in Kansas—on the voting question. Men, women and children were scarce in that locality; but as Damascus was famous for its swords, so is Kickapoo for those other weapons that govern a nation. Kickapoo produced votes. A year ago, there were some fifteen hundred votes cast there, and all were cast with singular unanimity and enthusiasm for Lecompton. Now, alas! we must write over her gates, Kickapoo fuit. The glory thereof has departed. Like the famous blades of Damascus, the secret of whose manufacture is forgotten, the making of votes at Kickapoo is among the "lost arts." But about one hundred and fifty voters were recorded there on Monday. There's something singular about all this. We are waiting anxiously for the returns from Oxford or Delaware Crossings; they may have voted there.

The settlement of the Lecompton question, the easy money market East, and the large amount of valuable lands open to preemption, will, it is believed, induce a very heavy emigration this Fall.

When Kansas was first opened to settlement, it was generally believed that the arable land of the Territory was comprised in a narrow strip along the Missouri and its tributaries; that beyond that ran the mauvais terres, or great American desert. The eastern boundary of this sterile region is gradually receding before exploration and settlement. The line of settlements is now about one hundred and twenty miles west from the Missouri, and every day the pioneers are pressing beyond it. Your readers, by examining a recent map of Kansas, will find two streams of considerable importance, tributary to the Kansas River, called the "Republican Fork," and the "Smoky-Hill Fork." Up both these streams emigration is passing rapidly. Some gentlemen returned from an exploring tour up the Republican, the other day, bringing with them glowing accounts of the beauty and fertility of that region, and some fine specimens of iron and other ores, gypsum, &c. Here, crowding on the buffalo, and, for aught I know, using buffalo-trails for streets, some enterprising men have started the frontier town, called Minnie-woken. Then, a hundred and fifty miles from the Missouri, will soon be a populous valley. So the indomitable Yankee presses West.

Leavenworth cast over 1,700 votes the other day. It is, indeed, a great town, and we, the inhabitants thereof, are a great people. I would give you some statistics, were it not that my local pride will not permit me to diminish aught of our glory, and your credulity would halt at the real facts in the case. One thing, however, I must say: On the 15th day of July thirty-one buildings were destroyed by fire on our principal business street. To-day, on the site of every one of the burned buildings, there are stores in process of erection. Come and see.

EDITORIAL FESTIVAL.

Convention of New-Jersey Editors.

From the Newark Advertiser.

The semi-annual meeting of the Editorial Association of New-Jersey, was held yesterday at Paterson, and was largely attended, nearly every press in the State being represented, and a number of Editors from other States being present, together with several non-professional guests. It was a gathering of talent and ability such as is seldom assembled at one time, and its proceedings were marked with much sociability and interest. The delegates, numbering near 100, collected from different quarters during the morning at the Philadelphia Hotel, Jersey City, and at 1 P. M. proceeded in carriages provided for the purpose, to Paterson, by the Plank Road, arriving about 3 o'clock. The ride was very pleasant, a refreshing breeze blowing the most of the time, the only annoyance being the dust. On the way the party stopped, by invitation, at the Half-way House, where a handsome collation was provided, and again at the works of the Dundee Dam, at Acquackanonk, now called the village of Passaic, where they were met by a cavalcade of some 50 horsemen from Paterson, accompanied by a band of music.

After viewing the Dundee improvement—which is an undertaking of great magnitude, and which will, when completed, give immediate importance and growth to the village—the party were entertained with a bounteous collation by Col. J. W. ALLEN, the engineer. We gave a full account of this enterprise last week. Arriving at Paterson, they were escorted through the principal streets, the doors and windows of which were filled with spectators, and thence to "The Cottage on the Cliff," near the Falls—which, by the way, can hardly be called by that name, particularly at this season, as only a little rill remains of what was once a roaring cataract.

Here a sumptuous dinner was provided under the shade of noble trees, and the party, notwithstanding their previous feats in the operations of mastication and potation, did ample justice to it. More than two hundred persons sat down. Mr. SCOTT, proprietor of an extensive silk factory, presided, and introduced the speaking, by proposing the first regular toast—"The health of the President of the United States," which was duly honored. The health of Governor NEWELL was then given, and responded to by Dr. FRASER, of the State Gazette, who stated that the Governor had purposed to be present, but was detained by illness.

"The Press" was then toasted, and the Hon. HORACE GREELEY being enthusiastically called on, gave a fitting response, tracing briefly the progress of the art of printing, and calling on the fraternity to be true to its cause. He deprecated mingling vituperation with disputed points of principle, which, he said, could and should be discussed without individual denunciation. He was followed by "The Press of New-Jersey," which was handsomely responded to by Judge NAAR, of the Trenton True American.

J. P. JACKSON, Esq., being loudly called upon to respond to the toast in honor of "The Invited Guests," said he had been constrained, by urgent invitation, to be one of the happy guests here assembled, that he might again pass the place of his nativity, and revisit the scenes of his boyhood. He not only participated with pleasure in the associations and hospitalities of this agreeable entertainment, but recalled reminiscences of early life, which impart the charms of reality to the recollections of "auld lang syne." Through this picturesque and romantic grove, where now is spread this ample and generous board, he had often roamed; he had viewed with rapt delight the roaring cataract, extending over the now bare and craggy rocks around us, up to the very spot where we now stand, and pouring its rapid and foaming flood in one wide sheet into the yawning abyss below. He had followed the turbulent stream through the dense foliage which lined its banks, till it became the truly peaceful Passaic, and there in the solitude of its quiet repose, enjoyed his youthful sports on its soft blue waters.

Here, gentlemen, the last Indian tribe of the Lenape nation, (the Pomptons,) a little more than a century ago, approached this then wild and sequestered scene, and gazing with awe upon what they called the "Great Falls," fastened their canoes and retired northward to the river and beautiful plain that now bears their name. But these sons of the Eagle have faded away, and now, on this very spot, is convened an editorial corps, who exert more influence in this country than did the whole power of the Press at the period, not far back, when the wild men of the forest were the lords of the soil. Here at the base of this mountain, fostered by this cataract, subjugated by the skill and labor of man to material uses, in almost endless variety, has sprung up in little more than half a century a manufacturing city, populous and prosperous, the pride of our State and Nation for the diversified genius and industry of her citizens, and the vast accumulation of almost every species of manufactured products. A population of 20,000 now inhabit the vale below. [A voice cried, 25,000! Be it so, 25,000; no doubt of it, for our escort through the city gave abundant evidence of a growing community. Paterson owes a large debt of gratitude to ALEXANDER HAMILTON and his honored associates, whose patriotic and sagacious foresight laid and built there their large "Society for the Promotion of Useful Manufactures." This Society was incorporated in 1791, whereas, in the collection of Revolutionary relics back home, evidence not only of the legal ability and practical wisdom of its honored author, but of the unfailing liberality and early encouragement of American manufactures, which has ever been the policy of New-Jersey.

The mind and the work of man are thus continually changing the primitive scenes of nature, and adapting its strongest elements, and most subtle agents, to the enlargement of his sphere of usefulness, and to the promotion of the comfort and welfare of our race. The Press has produced, and is continually exerting, a powerful influence on the material and moral interests of mankind; and the telegraph acting on its ally, condensing thought and connecting minds and hearts by communications from continent to continent, imposes upon the editorial profession, whose agency is so potent, to direct thought and form opinions—a most solemn responsibility. At this enlightened era, when faith has almost become sight, and hope fruition, each individual heart should carefully guard its fountain, for out of them are light and life, and the pure and luminous rays of the former should rise from the earthly to the heavenly, that the way of the latter may grow brighter and brighter to the more perfect day.

The next toast was "The Editorial Convention," to which Colonel M. R. HAMMOND, of the Jersey Herald, responded. The principal subject matter of his speech, after alluding to the various changes and improvements made in the newspaper press, was the Electric Telegraph. He paid a handsome compliment to Professor HENRY, whom he claimed as a Jerseyman, and who, he said, deserved quite as much credit for the invention as Morse should; for he had prepared the way for him by his scientific investigations, the results of which he had freely scattered to the world for the common benefit.

But our limits will not permit any further report, beyond alluding to the excellent speeches which followed. "The State of Pennsylvania" being toasted, calls were made for Colonel FORNEY, of the Philadelphia City Item, not to be impromptued. Responses were made by Mr. TEMPLETON, Esq., "Jersey City" was responded to by Alderman FLANAGAN, after which speeches were made by the Hon. T. R. HOXSEY, of Paterson, and Mr. WURMAN, of Hoboken—the latter giving the health of Mr. CHARLES DAVENPORT, of Paterson, who briefly acknowledged the compliment.

By the time the speaking was concluded, evening had set in, and the adjoining grounds were filled with promenaders of both sexes. A band of music was in attendance, and soon dancing commenced among those disposed, and the evening was spent in various festivities. Some members of the Convention left last night, but others remained, and to-day will endeavor to transact some business—for which, it may easily be inferred, there was little opportunity yesterday.

The editors of Paterson, who acted as a Committee of Arrangements in preparing for the Convention, have rendered themselves illustrious, and we hope their names may live forever. The people of Paterson also deserve high praise for their hospitality.

A Military Staff for Washington and Oregon—Force to be Kept in Utah, &c.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Aug. 13.

Preparations are being made for the organization of an efficient military staff for Washington and Oregon Territories, preliminary to the contemplated operations against the hostile Indians, and to prevent a repetition of such defeats as were experienced by Colonel SteptoE. The object of the Secretary of War is to make them fully sensible of the power of the Federal army.

A force of 2,500 men will be kept in Utah. One of the Peace Commissioners, in a private letter, represents the affairs of the Territory as in a good condition. The arrival of the Peace Commissioners here is daily expected.

Secretary CASS last night suffered from another attack of a chronic affection. He was not at the State Department to-day, but transacted some little public business at his residence.

General FAIR, of Alabama, recently appointed Minister to Belgium, is in the city awaiting instructions.

The Troy Post-Office—The Late Elections—Opposition Eradicated in the South—Maryland—Probable Success of the Democracy There.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

WASHINGTON, Friday, Aug. 13, 1858.

The Hard Shells of Troy are not content with the assignment of their Post-Office in the late general allotment of spoils to Mr. FOSDA, the Soft Barnburner VAN BUREN candidate. The books have been reopened and a large debit item discovered against the purity of the Soft-shelled Democracy of even the preferred candidate, which needs must give pause to the appointing power. The appointment of Mr. FOSDA was duly gazetted in the Union, but the commission was withheld. Mr. MCARTHUR, his Hard Shell competitor, had charged Mr. F. with being a K. N. This was admitted, so far as taking the initiatory step, but with the important qualification that Mr. F. entered the den of conspirators for the purpose of exposing them. When this pretext reached the ears of the K. N.'s of modern Ilium, they came forward with remarkable zeal, and furnished Mr. MCARTHUR, who is an Irishman, and therefore a devotee to civil and religious freedom, with the proof that FOSDA was a third degree brother in good standing up to the time when he discerned a surer guide to his feet in the rising star of Old Buck's fortune. The whole of his ammunition was fired by Mr. MCARTHUR at the devoted head of the P. M. G., at one electrical discharge. The consequence is the suspension of the unlucky FOSDA. He will probably be Nortonized.

This is a very little matter, but it may serve to show the Native Americans of New-York the intensity of affection and gratitude entertained for them by the ruling powers at Washington; and it illustrates incidentally what they will gain by the threatened coalition by which some of them hope to throw the State into the hands of the Democrats.

Mr. BUCHANAN will feel powerfully strengthened in his uncompromising sectional course by the elections in Kentucky and Missouri. The ten thousand majority in the former State extinguishes opposition to the regular Democracy there. In Missouri there is left hardly a monument of Eastern Republicanism or Americanism. We have tremendous rumors of incalculable gains in the Buncombe District of North Carolina, (CLINGMAN'S,) which serves to alleviate the pain inflicted upon the Opposition by the election of a Democratic Governor, and of such a majority in the Legislature as will elect CLINGMAN Senator without a contest. Tennessee long ago went over to the Simon Pure Democracy, and there remains hardly a partyer faction opposed to it there. A singular agitation has arisen in Maryland which will almost certainly send that State in the wake of Missouri, and place her in the closest affinity with the Administration. The negroes have taken to running away in droves, and that with the manifest complicity and sympathy, if not active assistance, of some of the white inhabitants. Very great excitement has naturally followed over all the exposed parts of the State, and the Democrats, as usual, have had the address to fasten the responsibility for some of these outrages upon Know-Nothing citizens. One of the districts which has suffered most is Mr. RUNDY'S. That gentleman has taken a zealous part in denouncing these repeated emigrations of the colored population, without leave from their proprietors, but Democracy understands and plays its game quite too well to permit him to escape the toils of its web in that way. It is not improbable that the brilliant and eloquent H. WINTER DAVIS will be the solitary representative in the next Congress of opposition principles from staunch old Whig and Federal Maryland.

Both the present Senators, elected as Opposition, in times of high party excitement and strongly defined party entities, have rallied to the Administration. The only thing surprising in Mr. KENNEDY'S case is that he should have been elected. Beyond the capacity of wagging a voluble tongue in an empty head, in which any auctioneer could beat him, he has no single quality of the Senatorial character. Mr. PRATCE is a Senator of very high ability, but he lac

NEW BOOKS.

[illegible] Boston proper, and about one mile distant from it, lies what was once known as Noddle's Island, for some two centuries after the settlement of the present city [illegible] by a single family, and a favorite pasturage ground for horses and cattle. Such it was, indeed, as late as the year [illegible] quarter of a century ago. It is now an important part of the metropolis of New-England, with a population of some 17,000 persons, [illegible] and appliances of an increasing and prosperous trade. A history of Noddle's Island has been published in Boston, entitled A History of East Boston, with biographical sketches [illegible] early proprietors. By WILLIAM H. SUMNER, A. M. For more than a century and a half it was in the possession of the ancestors [illegible] of this history—General SUMNER. Hence his original interest in it. His attention was directed to it as early as the first year of the present century for its adaptation to the purposes of a city. For some than thirty years he waited for the slowly-coming time—and, when it came, he was prompt to take advantage of it. He seems never to have lost sight of his intention to become the founder of a new Boston, with on the ancestral acres which had descended to his kindred from the Shrimpters, and Tomlinsons, whose corn fields and potato-patches and grazing lands are now covered with houses and manufactories, and resounding with the din of [illegible] and the whistle of locomotive engines. It was an object worthy a man of liberal enterprise, and that persisted in with that perseverance and [illegible] of purpose which are necessary to the accomplishment of great designs.

This volume is composed of personal reminiscences, historical researches, biographical sketches of the early settlers and residents of the island, and a detailed account of the circumstances connected with the formation of the East Boston Company, and the progress of the City improvements. The amount of labor that has been bestowed upon it, to the minutest details, is amazing; but to this we must attribute the great variety and interest of the book. General SUMNER is a good student of American history, and familiar with all the authorities, and discusses several disputed points with singular controversial skill. One event which he chronicles is of so much historical interest that we must make special reference to it. We allude to his account of the engagement on Noddle's Island, between the provincial troops and the British, in which STARK, PUTNAM and WARNER were all engaged, and for which General SUMNER claims that it should be ranked by historians as the second battle of the Revolution. From the facts which he has brought together, showing the number of men engaged, and the severe loss of the enemy on that occasion, we have no doubt that the importance of this conflict has been overlooked. It is believed that field-pieces were fired by the Americans in this battle for the first time in the war. The whole chapter devoted to the military operations on Noddle's Island will be found of interest and value to every student of American history. The same may be said of the chapter devoted to the Maverick family.

The illustrations of this volume deserve a few words of comment. They consist of numerous engravings; maps of Noddle's Island in 1801 and of East Boston in 1856; and portraits of Governor GAGE, Governor SUMNER, (the father of the author,) and several of the early owners of the Island, from well-executed family pictures in possession of the General; and views of the first house built in East Boston, and of other edifices noticed in the course of the volume. They are all admirably executed, and not only illustrate but embellish the text.

In the flood of new publications we find this volume the most noteworthy. It is not often that the founder of a city is its historian; and it is seldom indeed that a man who has devoted his time and manhood to an important and favorite enterprise, is persistent to devote his declining years to the record of its rise and progress. General SUMNER is a distinguished citizen of Massachusetts, whose life has been full of various and honorable service to the State; and he has shown in the volume before us that he can fulfill both the conditions to which BACON awards eminence—the "bene facere" and the "bene dicere reipublicæ." And period of life when its active duties had not [illegible] and when he was as much interested as ever in its cares and its business, he has devoted himself with the diligence and enthusiasm of youth to a literary undertaking, from the labor of which even a professional author might well shrink, and has accomplished it with a success which one only who was exclusively a man of letters might well be proud. We have read the eight hundred closely printed pages which compose this volume with unflagging interest; and an interest [illegible] and sentiment [illegible] occupants, from the early days of our history to the present time, [illegible] subject in the [illegible] interior, but in the volume before us it is intimately blended with the history of a [illegible] project [illegible] developed in the mind of the author, and finally by his personal efforts [illegible], and entitling him to the [illegible] honors which mankind have in all ages bestowed upon the benefactors of cities.

There is a market for books as well as for [illegible] and many literary productions have come to an untimely end from being ushered into existence at the wrong time of year. The letters of "Belle Brittan," which have been collected into a volume and published by Messrs. DUNIGAN & BROTHER, under the title of Belle Brittan on a Tour at Newport, and Here and There, have the good fortune to come out just at the right time, when their light and airy gossip are exactly suited to the laxative influences of the weather. It is a book for watering-places, steamboats and railway carriages. Belle Brittan, we believe, is the assumed name of a well-known editor of this City. It is the first instance of an assumption of a female character by a masculine writer; but the author betrays his secret, by the dedication of the volume to a lady.

Mr. BUTLER'S Two Millions has been a much greater success, in one respect, than his more popular poem of Nothing to Wear. No one has had the assurance to dispute with him the authorship of the latter; and we do not hazard much in saying that it will not give rise to so many parodies and imitations. But Nothing to Wear was an inspiration, while Two Millions has evidently cost a good deal of labor and [illegible]. It reminds one of the Croakers and Fanny, not exactly by its delicious rhymes and humor, but by the manner of treating its subject, which is not by any means novel or felicitous. The story, such as it is, is exceedingly common-place, the satire rather too obvious, and the moral is musty. If the poem had not been published with the prestige of Mrs. McFLIMSEY to contain it, we should not have heard much about Two Millions. The name of the hero, Firkin, is not happy, and he has as little flesh and blood in his composition as the Uncle of Nicholas Nickleby, or Mr. Tulkingham or any other of the old bachelors whom DICKENS has tried to impart a genial interest to. The mixer of morals and poems is usually a most repulsive individual, and Mr. BUTLER'S Firkin is one of the most attractive of the class. Old SIMON ECWINS, who snuffed out the candle because it was just as comfortable in the dark, had that touch of nature which makes the whole world kin. But Firkin is merely a tolerably disagreeable abstraction, without any traits of humanity in his composition. [illegible] clever hits in the poem and some little touches of pathos, but, as a whole, the [illegible] generally conceded to be a failure. It would be quite superfluous to make quotations from a book which has been so extensively read of late, and probably read by all who might be pleased to.

Another volume of memoirs of RACHEL, from HARPER & BROTHERS we have the Memoirs [illegible] of Mademoiselle RACHEL. [illegible] Loaded. "Three fourths of the work," says the author, "was written during the life of the celebrated woman, whose career constitutes its subject." It is RACHEL the actress, not RACHEL the woman, that Madame DE B—— has aimed to paint.

"If," she says, "those who delight in the indiscriminate revelations of the foibles of poor human nature take up this book in the hope of meeting with a detailed account of the liaisons attributed to the great tragédienne, we warn them that nothing so piquant seasons its matter-of-fact pages. Whatever could convey an idea of her character, temper and inclinations, all that had any connection with her dramatic talent, we were bound to record; farther, we had nothing to add from the garrulous chronique scandaleuse of the day."

In regard to the visit of RACHEL to this country, though it proved so melancholy in its termination it is a great mistake in Madame de B—— to imagine that the great actress was not properly appreciated here. FELIX, the brother, may have been disappointed in the pecuniary results of the experiment, but RACHEL herself could not have been disappointed at the reception she met here. Madame de B—— says, in reference to the visit of RACHEL to this country:

"We have now reached one of the most important events in the career of Mademoiselle RACHEL; its direr results hung like a funeral pall over the remainder of her life, which it shortened and finally ended.

This ill-planned expedition, the subject of the most absurd and exaggerated reports, was altogether a financial speculation, in which art was even more than usually a secondary consideration. RACHEL herself was but an instrument to advance the interests of others. Her whole family had conspired to bring about this grand finale, which was intended to make every member of it rich; the merit of its conception was due to the fertile imagination of RAPHAEL. Inexperienced, hair-brained, full of chimerical illusions, the young Israelite imagined that the pockets of the citizens of the United States, mines richer and more inexhaustible than those of Peru, solely awaited the advent of his sister to yield up their ready coined treasures. Even old FELIX, who had hitherto manifested the most consummate skill and prudence in the management of his daughter's interests, was inoculated with this insane spirit of adventure, excusable in a man of thirty, but strange, indeed, in one of his age and experience. The contagious vertigo resembled the fatal one of old, which was the precursor of the ruin of the nation. In the present case it was the hitherto fortunate RACHEL who was doomed to pay the penalty of the family error.

From the day the fascinating vision of the American placer took possession of their bewitched imagination, there was no peace for RACHEL. Continually pointing to the golden mirage the demon of covetousness spread before them, they assailed her with constant solicitations. RAPHAEL, SARAH, DINAH, LEAH, incessantly dinned into her ears the 1,700,000 francs realized by JENNY LIND in thirty-eight nights. An estimate was made of the expenses and profits of the expedition: the latter were not to amount to less than 2,554,600 francs. Of this sum RACHEL was to receive 1,200,000 francs free of all expenses; her three sisters, 170,000 francs each. As to RAPHAEL, he to was have all he could make after paying expenses.

The least reflection, the least experience of men and things would have shown the weak points of this plan of campaign, and dispelled all illusions. But these children of Israel were so completely carried away, American dollars shone so brightly before their dazzled eyes, they could not perceive how little connection existed between the easy gains made in a foreign land by a singer or a dancer, and those made by a tragic actress.

Had RAPHAEL been guilty of two literary ideas, his wild anticipations of success would have been somewhat tamed by the difference between the French classic drama and the English or Shakespearian, which is also that of the United States. That Mme RISTORI should charm even those among the Parisians who were ignorant of her language is easily accounted for; the subjects of the tragedies she played were, for the most part, familiar to the French public; they were treated and developed in the same manner as their own tragedies; they therefore asked no more than the Italian actress could give them, and that they did not understand they knew intuitively."

"A last, and certainly not the least important consideration, was one quite overlooked by the ambitious manager. He forgot, or did not choose to remember, that between him, the improvident and inexperienced youth, ignoring the language, the customs and manners, the men and things of the country he was going to put to contribution, and BARNUM, the famous showman who exhibited JENNY LIND, and whose extraordinary tact, great experience, and well-combined measures in the way of puffs, trumpet-pealed announcements, &c., &c., had so largely influenced her success, there was an immeasurable distance.

From the moment this great project was conceived to that which witnessed its execution, nothing else was thought of, nothing else was cared for. We will not pause to speak of all the attempts made by friends and admirers to dissuade the tragédienne from this suicidal design. It was whispered that inducements of considerable pecuniary value were tried in vain. Among these bits of private gossip, it was said that, in accordance with a wish expressed by the tragédienne to possess a set of clasps to confirm the superb parure of jewels she wore with the costume of Adrienne Lecouvreur, the sum of 100,000 francs was offered on condition she would remain in France. This, though a paltry consideration when opposed to the potent one of the expected 1,200,000 francs, was still too important to be slighted. The condition was accepted, the sum was sent; part of it was used for the purchase of the clasps, the remainder prudently added to the mass, and the tragédienne remained—the handsome bribe purchased a respite of six months.

It must be owned, however, that it was long before RACHEL herself viewed the emigration in the fair colors in which it was pictured by those who had an interest in her going. Such was her irresolution, that, to the very last moment, RAPHAEL trembled lest she should give it up altogether. However, it was said that he had wisely provided against such an emergency, and insured himself in more ways than one against any eventual backsliding. Under color of losses at the Bourse, he borrowed a sum to defray the expenses of a preliminary voyage to America, undertaken to make the arrangements for her reception there. He afterward obtained a second installment for some other preparatory requisite, then again another to advance the month's pay to the actors engaged, for the passage expenses, &c., &c. When he had thus borrowed to the amount of 80,000 or 100,000 francs, he felt more secure for his own share of compensation.

On the 11th of August all doubt was at an end; RACHEL embarked in the Pacific. The countenance of the tragédienne wore a heavy cloud. Mute and thoughtful, she seemed to leave the shores of Europe with marked reluctance. It might be that the natural grief of parting with friends had thus saddened her; some of the members of the company suggested that she might be reflecting on M. DUMAS' pleasant prediction that should Mademoiselle RACHEL succumb to climate, fatigue or disease, like Mademoiselle SONTAG, her brother RAPHAEL would make the best of the misfortune by having her embalmed, and exhibiting the body of RACHEL to the Americans, since he could not exhibit her alive."

Her very first day on board was marked by an incident that might well have inspired sad presentiments. One of the passengers, who was far gone in a consumption, died that afternoon. The body was put into a coffin and placed in one of the boats. For the first few days the presence of death cast a gloom on the passengers; for some time, when walking on the deck, they either avoided the side where the body hung in the little boat, or the laugh was hushed, the voice lowered to a whisper, the quick pace slackened as they passed by. But the impression of awe that produced this respect was soon effaced, and the merry chat, the light song, and cheerful laugh were heard, as uncontrolled and free as though that sad memento of what was, is, and will be, to the end of time itself, was no longer there. The mute eloquence of those tips doomed to eternal silence was soon unheeded by the thoughtless crowd, and the poor aunt of the youth was the only one whose countenance retained any trace of sadness."

Memoir of Joseph Curtis, a Model Man, is the title of a small volume by Miss C. M. SEDGWICK, just published by the HARPERS. The title is one that will be likely to provoke a more serious criticism of the volume than it will bear. A model man is an object which will be closely scrutinized, and the subject of Miss SEDGWICK'S volume, though a most worthy and excellent person, and entitled to be regarded as a model in many of the relations of life, would hardly be looked upon as a model man in that sense which the name seems to indicate. The story of Mr. CURTIS' life, which was not by any means an eventful one, is well told by Miss SEDGWICK. He was born in Connecticut in 1782, of poor parents, and made his first start in life as a printer; but he afterwards engaged in trade. He was a man of [illegible] intelligence, and was for many years closely connected with the Free Schools and philanthropic institutions of the City.

AMHERST COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

A Regular Yankee Festival—Wendell Phillips and Nehemiah Adams—Response of the Literary Worthy Alumni—Psi Upsilon and other Meetings.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

AMHERST, Wednesday, August 11.

It is a genuine refreshment, one that heals the bones and takes the soreness out of bruised flesh, to attend, in the spirit of it, a genuine New-England Commencement. Indeed, I am moved to rebuke you for calling "Commencements" those floral exhibitions which you give at Niblo's and the Academy of Music. The sum of one of them is, the buying out of a florist's stock, a squeeze of beauty into a very hot room, the addition of a dozen or two names to the list of Alumni of Columbia or the University, a new crop of D.D.'s, and a blow about it in the newspapers. But a Commencement in the heart of New-England is a sensation through half the State, a grand jubilee occasion, a holiday, or rather a week of them. They have great Commencements at Yale, but there the jubilations of Yale are bounded by the noise of New-Haven—the University is the great centre of the City—still the circumference is a City, which has its own excitements, so that it is to the Alumni that the occasion is the greatest treat. Here it is very different. The College is the town—the noise that it does not make is never heard, "the exercises" govern the hours for meals, appoint or postpone the social and business engagements of the whole troop of villages that lie within eyeshot of the Chapel Tower, and there are dozens of them, each marked by their two or three church spires, and their factories showing miles away how the rivers run. It is the town meeting of rural New-York, multiplied by 20—the General Training indefinitely enlarged, minus the fuss and feathers, and plus all the literary ladies of the brigade's beat. And there never was a finer week for Commencement, in spite of the thin-edge of the moon and the fact that twenty miles east of us it has been raining the whole week past, than this one on which, fortunately, Amherst meets her annual appointment.

The first "exercise" was the address by President STEARNS, on Sunday evening, to the graduating class—the Baccalaureate Sermon. I did not hear it, but those who did say that it was listened to with profound attention—that it was practical, pithy, and full of marrow; that the new wearers of the Bachelor's honors will be the better for it, years to come—which is saying a good deal, since to my certain knowledge, a great many Baccalaureate Sermons are Baccalaureate Bores; dry disquisitions on topics of theological inquiry—not interest—over which those who do not sleep may be set down as eminently polite men, and so far promising of great usefulness.

Monday night the Sweetzer prizes were contested for—Mr. MIGHILL (Junior) and PHILLIPS (Sophomore) taking the first awards.

The Phi Beta Kappa Society had a meeting Tuesday. The Chapter is young here, and in consequence the gathering of square-gold-keyed gentlemen was not large, nor, to judge from the report of insiders, enthusiastic. In the afternoon the great Church was crammed to hear the Rev. Dr. NEHEMIAH ADAMS, of the South Side View, discourse on the family of States, to the Phi Beta. It was very good and a great many slept well under it. It was not lacking in particularly brilliant passages, and thus it was sound as a nut and eminently respectable. It is not customary for any of the audience to leave, however moving the discourse may be, so the ladies in the gallery and the gentlemen below sat it out with Christian patience. By the way, that separation of the sexes would work beautifully at your next University Commencement; it would rid the house of a perpetual tittering that I am told is not very much enjoyed by orators, and, for its novelty, would afford the young gentlemen who bear off the honor a most wholesome rest at an improper hour from furious flirtations.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, in the forenoon of the same day, (Tuesday,) delivered an oration before the Social Union, with great effect. It was the same, substantially, which once before he has delivered—concerning the relations of Scholars to the times—a masterly oration, tempered and touched up to the present times. Nobody slept while he talked,—the house was as still as a church ever should be. Some older graduates may wish to know what is this "Social Union," at whose invitation Mr. PHILLIPS came on to preach to the assembled intellect of Hampshire and the surrounding counties. Twenty years ago there existed three societies in Amherst, which then were its chief glory—the Athenian, Alexandrian, and Social Union. Of these, the first and last were secret societies—but the members were apportioned to them by lot—one third of each class to each, upon their admission to College. Each society had its weekly meeting—its open and formal exhibitions—its library and reading-room; but competition at last ran up the cost of supporting them to so large a figure that the Faculty urged, and the students at last consented, to recast the whole into two, make an equitable division of their property, and leave the choice of new members open to the electioneering of the old ones. In this new cast Athenia and Alexandria had their origin, and the joint meetings of the two were called the "Social Union,"—thus giving to the first two their treasured memories, to the third the honor of the name. The operation was no doubt a wise one, though it had the effect of distracting the Alumni of each, and leaving them in doubt whether their old love were still a living flame. Latterly, however, matters have improved, and each of the two has its hall in the new Alumni building, which it is proceeding to fit up for meeting and Commencement purposes. Hereafter the Athenian and Alexandrian Alumni meetings are likely to prove among the most attractive features of the week. And, by the way, if any Amherst graduate has a loose bit of cash to spare upon his mother's most worthy daughters, he may be sure that, from $5 to $500, nothing would come amiss, or be more highly appreciated in any quarter than this. The records of the ancient Athenians are safe yet in the modern Athenian Secretary's hands, and the new Alexandrians' treasure, among their relics the records of the bold boys' doings in the old Rhetorical Room, on the second floor of the Chapel.

Wednesday evening was surrendered to a concert by Dodworth's in the church, of which a crowded house testified warmly to its excellence. But the concert over, came other meetings of a more private nature—the gathering of Psi Upsilons from sundry and several other colleges, in the beautiful hall whereof the fame has gone out very widely—a hall, moreover, which, for beauty and propriety of design and decorations I am sure there is no parallel to the westward of the Trinity Bay end of "the cable." Other societies were having their reunions at this hour, of a like nature.

Governor BANKS and Mr. BURLINGAME arrived in town late last night, and the rumor was current toward midnight that both these distinguished young men had been initiated into mysteries of which they were ignorant yesterday morning. There will be much curiosity to-morrow, when they ascend the platform, to observe how they bear their honors, and, too, what honors they wear.

Thursday is the great day—Commencement proper. The Alumni have an adjourned meeting at 8 in the morning—they rise early in this latitude—and in the afternoon is the Alumni dinner.

The Great Gala Day—In Church and Out—Alumni Dinner—Banks and Burlingame Among the Literary Prophets.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

AMHERST COLLEGE, Thursday, Aug. 12, 1858.

Commencement Day dawns wet and dull. The streets are running rivers; the sidewalks would be safer but that on the most traveled side they are flagged. The seats on the Green are drained and deserted. The crowds that were above them last night, drinking not beer, and [illegible] are housed, and still [illegible] morning, say till several o'clock; there are no more people in the streets than if it were a common day. By 8 o'clock, however, the carriages begin to lie in spite of the unremitting rain. They come up from the Hadleys, from Belchertown and Pelham—from every quarter and by every street—"top carriages," buggies, schooners, farm-wagons—all crowded with old folks and young folks, young men and particularly maidens. By 9 o'clock the clouds break away, the sun comes out hot, and the crowd of vehicles blackens all the streets. The tents are lively enough now; around the front of each of them there is a gathering of boys and negroes, struggling for the next chance to invest in peanuts or apples. Razor-strop SMITH dilates to a regular Nassau-street crowd on the virtues of his wares; while from a wagon in the centre of a gaping and grinning press a jolly Yankee, who was a Know-Nothing orator during the last Presidential campaign, comes the Cicero and the Patrick Henry and the Tom Hood over the virtues of his soap—three cents a cake. The procession of College officers, alumni and students filed into the Congregational Church at 9 o'clock, but outside the crowd reached to the chains; wagons are drawn up under the open windows, and while "the Exercises" last, from 9 till 2 o'clock, the jam around the front and under the windows will continue unabated. The rustic beaux from a dozen or twenty miles out of town, come peeping through the outside mass, but making no effort to enter, because those incorruptible baton-bearers, who have acted as deputy-sheriffs these forty years, turn the belles into the galleries alone. So they take Commencement strolling over the College grounds, coming in strong to the hotels at dinner time, and from the piazzas, after that, enjoying the music that is sure to be improvised for their enjoyment.

Inside the church, though the programme read like your City Commencement programmes, the entertainment has some marked peculiarities. The aisles are kept clear, the Marshals dispose the late in corners quietly—and, as far as may be, in accordance with the dignity and honors of the Alumni, for the whole house below is supposed to be surrendered to the Alumni, their ladies, and the students. The orators are applauded, if they deserve it, or are favorites; if one is dull, he comes off the stage in peace. Two particularly brilliant speakers were awarded a bouquet each—if we rightly discerned—from the same fair hands. Bouquets, it is perceived, are not a recognized institution here. From first to last there is no moving about the house—it is like a meeting, except while Dodworth's Band is playing, during which the introductions and brief réunions proceed. On this occasion, President STEARNS presides, assisted by Prof. TYLER.

In front of the pulpit Dr. HEMAN HUMPHREY, Prof. HITCHCOCK, Gov BANKS and Mr. BURLINGAME occupy the chief seats of honor. On the platform to the right, the Trustees and the most honored friends of the College; on the left, the Faculty and more antiquated Alumnis. The graduating class numbered 51, out of which 22 had appointments. These, except the Valedictory, Latin Salutatory, and Greek Philosophical Oration, all appear as of equal honor, the order being subject to allotment. Really, however, the appointments are based upon the result of the four-years merit-roll; and those who had no appointments at all, numbering among them some who, by unanimous consent, are the most promising of the class, take the lack of demand for their oratorical display with perfect composure. These are wonderfully altered times since the days of the great Gorham rebellion, when whole classes filled with "conscientious scruples" refused to receive honors, and took the consequences of their insubordination.

Of the orators the most effective were Mr. HENRY E. HUTCHINSON and Mr. CHARLES B. ANDREWS—their addresses being exceedingly interesting and successful. Mr. LORDELL'S was above the average too. It is fair to say, moreover, that all were manly and not one stupid. It was remarkable how little any of them had been damaged by rhetorical instructions,—speaking with great freedom and without any affectation, just as if they had been used to it in the common schools, and as if the Professor of Rhetoric had not drilled them to "practice the gestures" in concert. The Valedictorian in his addresses took his several audiences on their tender side. When he bade farewell to his classmates it was refreshing to see Gov. BANKS wiping a tear out of his eye with his knuckle, privately. When out of these country colleges, the men who have been intimately associated for four years part finally, there is no disposition to joke about it,—it is a serious matter, and they take it like brothers separating forever. The President, who never strayed in a single syllable from his Latin, whatever the announcement he made, granted the diplomas to the following Baccalaureates:

Timothy Field Allen, Putney, Vt.
Charles Bartlett Andrews, Montague.
James Brown Beaumont, Penn Yan, N. Y.

The degree of A.M. was conferred upon several, in course; that of D.D. upon the Revs. JONATHAN BRACE, EZEKIEL RUSSELL and MCEWEN, and that of LL.D. upon the Hon. WM. C. CALHOUN, of Springfield. President STEARNS, in a brief prayer, closed the exercises, and the Alumni marched in procession to Alumni Hall, where all sat down by classes, so far as it was possible, to an ample and elegant dinner. After which, the President toasted Massachusetts. To which Gov. BANKS responded in a speech of much dignity and learning,—it sounded oddly in the shrewd "Iron-man," who has so much oftener been heard on the stump than talking to a congregation of D.D.'s, LL.D.'s, and A.M.'s; but he got through his Latin without tripping, and left the impression that "the man of the times," who 16 years ago was a ragged Lowell urchin, was well-bottomed, and, wherever he got it, educated. He extolled the liberality to learning of the Bay State, and dilated on the pride that the State felt in her Colleges and Schools. He pointed out the extraordinary paths to glory and power that the American scholars are invited and expected by all the world to walk in; and passing naturally from individuals to States, showed how the glory and power of States consisted in their recognizing no injustice, protecting no oppression. The Governor was applauded very warmly, and the oldest trustees—always held to be the most critical of auditors on these points—wiped their spectacles, and expressed to each other their satisfaction that this self-educated Governor was well educated, and entirely orthodox as to the value of the orthodox modes of educating men in the Massachusetts Colleges.

The President next gave the following sentiment: "The Congress of the United States: Massachusetts has never failed to stir its heart when the Chord of Middlesex on one occasion spoke. Hear, Hear, Hear, Hear!"

Hon. Mr. BURLINGAME, in the midst of great applause, responded characteristically and happily, with many allusions to the "long-haulers" he had seen in the bird-track gallery—expressing his curiosity to see the worms those early birds caught—complimenting almost extravagantly, the manly, sturdy style of statesmen and the independence of thought that the commencement-orators had had developed—hoping the professors would always be as successful in furnishing the desirable circumstances, and then letting their students expand in their own way, throwing the golden learning into their minds, and standing quietly, anxiously apart, permitting it to melt out undisturbed; and concluding with the sentiment: "Amherst, as long as her scholars are not snobs, her influence will be strong and her counsels not timid." Mr. BURLINGAME evidently made a hit, and the D.D.'s confessed he had passed muster like a full-bred Collegian, who had spent a profitable president graduate's term in the world's University.

The next toast was in honor of Ex-President HUMPHREY. While he was replying, the whistle of the Palmer cars sounded—signifying, among a great many other things, that I must defer till to-morrow all notes of the rest of the meeting; of the repeated Alumni gatherings; of the wealth of this College, which some, even of its graduates, have not yet got over counting poor; of its marvelous improvements and its prospects, brilliant enough now to content its most ardent admirers. LETTERS FROM WATERING-PLACES.

The Fortifications at Old Point—Officers on the Stations, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

OLD POINT COMFORT, VA., Tuesday, Aug. 10, 1858.

In my letter, yesterday, I gave the readers of the TIMES a brief historical sketch of Old Point Comfort, as a Summer resort for invalids and pleasure-seekers. I now propose to glance at it as a military post and fortification. It was stated that in 1814 the British troops landed here and established their rendezvous, while they burned the town of Hampton and laid waste the surrounding country. Not until this time did the American Congress appreciate not only the importance of a system of sea-coast defences, but also the expense and demoralizing tendency of calling together large bodies of citizens to cover extensive lines of field-works, as was the case at New-York during the last war with England. It was determined to establish a system of a permanent character, and a corps of Engineers was established, who made a close examination of our whole coast, examining all existing works, and selecting points for new fortifications. Old Point Comfort was selected as one of these sites—as the action of the British troops had demonstrated the absolute ne*cessity of strong defences at the entrance of the* Chesapeake.

ABBOTT says that just before the capitulation of Ulm, NAPOLEON sent Captain BERNARD, a young officer of Engineers, on an important reconnoitering expedition. With great skill and intrepidity he prosecuted his mission, advancing almost to Vienna. On his return, NAPOLEON personally examined him, and was much pleased with his answers. Among other things, he remarked that it would be of great advantage to direct the army upon Vienna, passing by the fortified places, and that once master of the capital the Emperor might dictate laws for the whole Austrian monarchy. This was taking too great a liberty. NAPOLEON severely replied, "You are very presumptuous! a young officer to pretend to trace out a campaign for me! Go and await my orders." So soon as the young man had retired, NAPOLEON turned to General RAPP and said, "There is a man of merit; he has observed correctly; I shall not expose him to the risk of being shot—I shall have occasion for him by-and-by." This young man finally became an Aid to NAPOLEON and one of the most distinguished engineers in the world. It was he who planned Fort Monroe at Old Point Comfort. Through the influence of Mr. GALLATIN, himself a foreigner, General BERNARD was appointed at the head of the Board of Commissions on Sea-Coast Defences, and with him were associated Commodores LEWIS WARRINGTON and J. D. ELLIOTT, Chief-Engineer J. G. SWIFT, Colonel of Engineers W. K. ARMSTRAD, and Major of Engineers, WM. MCKEE.

Fresh from the Grand Army of NAPOLEON, General BERNARD had the most extravagant ideas of military works, and planned his fortifications to be garrisoned, not by hundreds and thousands, but by tens and hundreds of thousands. He had a notion that the strength of this country, like that of his native land, depended, in great measure, upon the impregnability and capacity of her lines of fortifications. He had not yet learned that the true strength of a land of Liberty laid in the stout hearts and strong arms of her brave yeomanry. Under these circumstances was old Fort Monroe planned and constructed, with her massive strength and enormous proportions.

I now find within the garrison five companies of troops and 30 officers. Three more companies are shortly expected, with a proportionate number of officers. The following is a list of the officers now present:

Staff.—Brevet Col. Harvey Brown, Major 2d Artillery, Commandant; Surgeon, N. S. Jarvis; First Lieutenant, M. S. Taylor, 2d Artillery, Regiment Quarter-Master.

Company "A," 1st Artillery.—Captain, I. Vodges; First Lieutenant, F. T. Wyman; Second Lieutenant, A. Smead; Brevet Second Lieutenant, E. R. Warner.

Company "D," 1st Artillery.—Brevet-Major, J. A. Haskin; First Lieutenant, William Jenkins; Second Lieutenant, S. M. Cooper; Brevet Second Lieutenant, G. H. Weeks.

Company "I," 2d Artillery.—Captain, A. A. Gibson; First Lieutenant, J. D. Bingham; Second Lieutenant, Thomas Grey; Brevet Second Lieutenant, F. Beach.

Company "B" 2d Artillery.—Captain, J. H. Carlisle; Second Lieutenant, J. W. Barringer; Brevet Second Lieutenant, W. Sinclair.

Company "G," 4th Artillery.—Captain, A. P. Howe; First Lieutenant, R. C. Drum; Second Lieutenant, C. H. Morgan; Brevet Second Lieutenant, A. G. Robinson.

Col. RENE E. DE RUSSY, of the Engineer Corps, commands outside of the fort and has charge of the Government property, including a number of buildings, shops and ordnance stores.

In time of war it would require 2,450 men to garrison Fort Monroe. The following is her armament so far as is publicly known—the real strength of the place being a secret known only to the Government: 42 42-pounders, 189 32-pounders, 10 24-pounders, 14 18-pounders, 25 12-pounder, 12 field pieces, 16 flank howitzers, 20 heavy 8-inch howitzers, 5 light do., 3 18 inch mortars, 7 heavy 10-inch do., 3 light do., 5 8-inch do., 5 16-inch stone mortars, 15 cocherns—making a total of 371 guns, costing $335,210—the fortification without the armament having cost the Government $2,402,471.

A notice of the "Rip-Raps, of Virginia," I must postpone for another letter, as the mail is closing and would not be "after time." In the meantime, rely upon it we are enjoying ourselves "hugely." The proper season for visiting Old Point is just now at hand; and though many of the old guests are leaving, others are crowding in. Mosquitoes are unknown here, and the fish are becoming finer and more abundant every day. Adios.

Visitors at Old Point—Ex-President Tyler—The Belle of the Point—Rich Scenes—Chowder Party—Deserters, &c., &c.

OLD POINT COMFORT, VA., Wednesday, Aug. 11, 1858.

The sudden and unexpected roar of cannon, last evening, from the ramparts of Fort Monroe, startled the guests at Old Point, and made the "Hygeia" tremble under the loud burst of sound. The inquiry upon the lips of every one was, "What means this firing?" It appeared that three soldiers had deserted, and the firing was designed to notify the sentinels at the outposts. The notification, however, did no good, as the deserters have not been arrested.

The company at the "Hygeia" continues very full, though constantly changing and shifting, the departures being about balanced by the arrivals. The Baltimore steamer arrives every morning, and the Washington boat once a week. The boats from Norfolk are arriving or departing almost every hour in the day. Parties leaving New-York in the morning train for the South reach Baltimore in time for the steamer at 5 o'clock in the evening, arriving at Old Point at sunrise the next morning. The fare on the "Bay line" from Baltimore is only three dollars, and will compare favorably, in point of comfort, with the best North River boats. Visitors from Washington can take through tickets by the way of Baltimore, and make the trip in less than fifteen hours.

Ex-President TYLER having purchased a farm only two miles from the hotel, spends most of his time here in social communication with the guests, all of whom express for him the highest consideration. The old gentleman [illegible] votes his attention to agriculture, [illegible] not according to the old Virginia principles of making all you can this year, and letting the next take care of itself. His family attend religious worship at the chapel within the fort, where Mrs. TYLER has her own pew. JOHN TYLER is now in his 69th year, but looks as young as when he occupied the Presidential Chair, and is quite as jovial and full of fun. He expresses the greatest confidence in posterity doing his administration justice, and says that time and reflection but satisfies him the more with every act of his official life, not one of which would he now change had he the power.

Hon. A. DUDLEY MANN, late Assistant Secretary of State, is sojourning here, and is loud in his praises of the beneficial effects of the air and sea-bathing upon invalids. He came here himself suffering severely from a serious affection of the kidneys, and has been entirely relieved. He is now enjoying the hog-fish and soft crabs, and discussing his pet scheme for a ferry between Fortress and the Chesapeake. Having procured an act of incorporation from the State of Virginia of the most liberal character—more liberal even than that of the Hudson Bay Company or the Crédit Mobilier of France—he is now engaged in selecting thirty directors as required by the charter.

On Monday evening we had a grand dress-ball, the lady guests appearing in much elegant dressing. The Virginia belles shone out with considerable brilliancy, and the only drawback was a scarcity of beaux. Yet the immense dancing-saloon was made to rock with the devotees of Terpsichore until "the wee small hours of morning." The band of music is a very superior one, and unusual sociability and good feeling prevailed throughout the hotel. We have no cliques or exclusions, but all appear as one family, and get the greatest amount of enjoyment possible. This they derive from every source, as if by a process of absorption.

But the Virginia belles have not little [illegible] puted away at Old Point. A greater amount of female beauty is seldom seen congregated at one point than is now visible here, representing it does, almost every State in the Union. The "Empire City" sends up a numerous delegation, among whom I notice Mrs. Emmet and her fascinating daughter, Mrs. Houston, and Miss Pleasants, whose charms are acknowledged even by the blooming fair ones of the South.

The greatest belle, however, is a Mrs. BAKER, of Mississippi, a widow, young, beautiful and wealthy, and the "lady-love" of ex-Governor POOTS, who is devoted in his attentions. Where is it that very young widows, if beautiful and rich, are not belles? Mrs. B. evidently takes the medal. The premiums may be distributed to Miss E. A. Blake, of Florida; Miss Carmichael, of Annapolis; Miss Fowler, of Memphis; Miss Winter, of Washington; Miss Poe, of Georgetown, D. C.; Miss Whitfield, of North Carolina; Miss Brown, daughter of Governor Brown, of Florida; Miss Berry, of St. Louis; Miss Greer, of Ohio; Miss

[illegible] Engineer and Superintendent to the Canal Board [illegible] experiment with the [illegible]

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

ALBANY, Thursday, August 12, 1858.

There has been considerable by-play of an interesting character at the State Hall within the few days. Early last Spring, Gl. HARTWELL, Engineer on the middle division of the Erie Canal, was suspended by State Engineer RICHMOND, who was desirous of filling the vacancy with O. C. CHILDS, a gentleman of unquestioned capacity as an engineer, but whose appointment was steadily and successfully resisted by Commissioner JAYCOX, at several meetings of the Contracting Board. The other members of the Board for several months awaited the result of this pretty little quarrel between the two Democratic members, in the expectation, if not in the hope that they would be able to compose their difficulties and not allow matters to go to such an extent as to menace the harmony of the Democratic household. The State Engineer, as the representative of Comptroller CHUSACK, and the left wing of the party, made several attempts to get Mr. CHILDS appointed; but Mr. JAYCOX, who represents the Hard wing, (which in the State Hall is headed by Secretary of State TUCKER,) being immovable, all these attempts failed. In this manner matters went along until the meeting of the Board on the 30th July, when there were but three members—a bare quorum—present. At that meeting, Mr. RICHMOND'S resolution, appointing Mr. CHILDS, was declared carried, it receiving the assent of himself and Mr. Auditor BENTON, Mr. Commissioner SHERRILL voting in the negative. This was a triumph on the part of the State Engineer which Commissioner JAYCOX did not, of course, much relish. It was, however, but a temporary triumph—that wing of the Democracy, for at the next meeting of the Board on the 5th instant, when all the members were present, the resolution appointing Mr. CHILDS was rescinded—Messrs. SHERRILL, JAYCOX and RUGGLES voting in the affirmative, and Messrs. BENTON and RICHMOND in the negative. Thus was the official existence of Mr. CHILDS cut short before he was fairly in office. Although beaten, Mr. RICHMOND had not yet exhausted his genius for retaliation; and so on the same day, immediately on the adjournment of the Board, he proceeded to exercise the authority vested in him by law, and removed J. P. GOODSELL, and in his place appointed Mr. CHILDS as Division Engineer on the Eastern (SHERRILL'S) Division, GEORGE H. CLARK, Resident on the same, and GUREN EDWARDS, Resident on the Middle (JAYCOX'S) Division, and appointed his brother, DANIEL RICHMOND, in the place of the latter, leaving the vacancy unfilled created by the removal of Mr. CLARK.

These were Jacksonian strokes, and it seemed as though the fur would soon begin to fly in earnest. The removal of GOODSELL, and the appointment of CHILDS, was a blow aimed direct at Commissioner SHERRILL, who is not distinguished for using the left when the right cheek is smitten, but believes in trying the virtue of a stroke back first. These matters stood for some four or five days, until the next meeting of the Contracting Board, which was yesterday, when all of Mr. RICHMOND'S acts were non-concurred in, the engineers removed restored, Mr. CHILDS dismissed, and all things placed back as they were. The vote in the Board stood: Messrs. BENTON, SHERRILL and JAYCOX in the affirmative, and Messrs. RICHMOND and RUGGLES in the negative. Thus was the State Engineer, and through him the Softs unheard, and Mr. JAYCOX, and through him the Hards placed in the ascendant. And so matters stand for the present. How long they will remain so is yet to be seen. The State Engineer may suspend as many Engineers, and as often as he chooses, and the Contracting Board may agree to or vote his action as they choose. It is to be presumed that the game is not yet played out, but that the State Engineer will find some way of making himself felt.

The awakening which has followed the appointment of the Hon. S. B. RUGGLES to the post of Canal Commissioner, has, as was to have been expected, aroused the Anti-Canal feeling of the stop-law men, who have an organ in the Albany Atlas and Argus. It was but natural that Mr. RUGGLES should thus early become the object of its abuse. He is charged with "extravagance," with "blowing his own horn," with the design of creating a monstrous debt, with visionary and insane ideas, &c., &c., &c. Now if there is any man in all the world who can afford to hear all this, Mr. RUGGLES is that very man. Having upwards of twenty years ago, by a report to the Legislature, incurred all these epithets and ten thousand more; having initiated a policy in regard to the canals for which he afterwards suffered martyrdom; and having lived to see that very same policy vindicated by experience and adopted as the settled policy of the State; having seen his predictions more than verified, and all the abuse of him at that time taken back, save by the six feet men of stop-law memory, who never learn or unlearn anything, returning now for a brief, and yet it is to be hoped a sufficient period, to that same post to participate in the finishing of the Erie Canal to its fullest volume, he can afford to bear in silence all his enemies can say of him. The enemies of the Canal, of course, complain, but its friends will and do rejoice at the opportune return of Mr. RUGGLES. The Atlas and Argus may understand what the Railway interests want and how they regard the return and the efforts of Mr. RUGGLES; but it cannot understand the real feeling among the people of all parties, particularly in the Western part of the State, to which Mr. R. has been assigned. There are but few "six feet," or stop-law men there who will respond to the tirades of the "cat-pace" organ. But as one man they hail the appointment as their great good fortune, as the best thing that could have happened for the State, and will not listen for an instant to the miserable stuff put forth by the Argus, about extravagance and the like. What extravagant measure has Mr. RUGGLES proposed? The Atlas and Argus refers to the proposition to raise the bridges so as to admit of the introduction of steam—so as to reduce the time between Buffalo and tide-water to four and five days—so as to increase the cargoes from 120 to 150 and 200 tons—so as to place the Erie Canal in a position to defy competition, and realize her destiny. To do this the bridges must be raised—Railroad bridges and all—(does the shoe pinch there?)—some one foot, some two feet, to a uniform height. And how much is this going to cost? What is this great piece of extravagance that so frightens the Railway-and-Anti-Canal organ? It is the Western Division to which Mr. RUGGLES must confine his attention. At the next meeting of the Canal Board he will report the entire cost of raising the bridges on his division. I venture the prediction that the entire expense will be found within fifteen thousand dollars, and likely will be not one-half that sum! And this is the insane extravagance with which Mr. RUGGLES is charged! A highly dangerous and extravagant man is that Mr. RUGGLES, and a marvelously sagacious journal is this Railway organ to find it out!

The subject of removing this obstruction to steam navigation on the canal will come before the Democratic Canal Board at its next meeting. Let them resist the measure if they dare. Let them go on to the record as postponing—for they can only postpone—steam navigation, and the day when by the expenditure of a few thousands o dollars the capacity of the Erie Canal will be more than doubled, and this Democratic Canal Board will make up a record on which they cannot stand for an instant. The railways may delude to see such a record made up, but the people, whose property the canal is, do not.

Steam on the canal has been shown to be perfectly practicable. There is no serious obstacle but the bridges. Mr. RUGGLES goes for raising them immediately, so that we may have at least one month of unobstructed steam navigation this season, and the commerce that best builders may, during the Winter, ready go ahead and construct their steam propellers for the Spring trade. A consideration looking to safety in navigating the canal, which, as has been said, will add one half to her capacity, place on her waters hundreds and thousands of steam propellers, which will take themselves not only the whole length of the canal, but down the Hudson, any and everywhere they choose to go in New-York harbor, to any slip, dock or warehouse, thus dispensing with three or four profits paid for towing on the river, tugging in the harbor, and demurrage at the dock. Each canal propeller will be independent in itself, and the canal business will be independent, going to and from tide-water without being compelled, like mere logs, to rely on towing companies on the canal or river, or in any harbor; but each boat will have within itself, that to obtain which no inconsiderable share of its earnings has hitherto been necessary—the means of locomotion—to say nothing about the time saved. Who does not at once see the magnitude of the revolution at hand—how great and immediate the results—how the "inexorable law of cheapness" is about to be applied to canal navigation and the movement of commerce that floats from the lakes to tide-water? Mr. RUGGLES would remove all obstructions to this great consummation; he would let no mere bridge, railway or otherwise, lay an embargo upon it. "Six feet men," men in the railway interest, and politicians of the "stop law school" may continue to do it, but on them let the responsibility rest.

RODERICK.

Danger of Traveling on the New-York and Erie Railroad.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A few weeks since the public ear was shocked by the report of an accident on the New-York and Erie Railroad near Port Jervis, by which several lives were lost, and many other passengers seriously injured.

On a subsequent downward trip over that road, I saw the locality of the accident, and consider it providential that it occurred at so favorable a point—the slope of the bank being only twenty or thirty feet high, free from trees and stumps, and the ground at its base a gentle declivity of green sward.

Over the mountain ranges between the Hudson and Delaware, and the Delaware and Susquehanna Rivers, there are but few spots where cars could be run off the track at a high rate of speed, with so little injury to passengers, as at that identical point.

The Delaware division is by far the most dangerous of the four great divisions of the New-York and Erie Railroad, following the sinuosities of the Delaware River some ninety miles, with many short curves, abounding in deep rock cuttings and heavy embankments across the gorges of the mountains. But by far the most dangerous portion of this rude division lies in the State of Pennsylvania, between Port Jervis and Narrowsburg, into which State the Company were forced to carry their road, (paying an annual tax of some $10,000 for opening up a passage through its sterile and rocky gorges,) owing to the east bank of the river being monopolized by the Delaware and Hudson Canal.

Here, for a distance of some twenty miles, the road is built in the face of steep cliffs, curving around projecting headlands at a height, in some places, of sixty to eighty feet above the river; and yet I was told that the time-table speed on that division was the same as on the other divisions of the road; but whether that is true or not, I state from personal observation, that we ran from Narrowsburg to Port Jervis, thirty-four miles, in less than one hour, and stopped once on the way long enough to take in water.

And yet, thanks to a kind overruling Providence, we arrived in safety. A switch misplaced, a broken rail, a rock loosened from its dizzy height and rolled on to the track, and we should have been hurled, in shapeless masses of quivering flesh, into the boiling current of the Delaware, or dashed to fragments against the acute angles of the rock cuttings. If it had been a fearful race for life, braving great danger to escape still greater, or on some errand of mercy where delay would have been death to hundreds, such speed would have been excusable, nay, even right, but no such motives existed; and I do not doubt but that nine-tenths of the passengers would have preferred one half the speed, and a cold breakfast an hour later at Port Jervis.

In general, I can speak favorably of the management of the trains over the Erie Road. The cars are luxurious, the conductors competent and attentive, the track is in fair condition, and the road is operated with as much safety to life and limb as are the same distances on the average of railroads.

My object in this communication has been to call the attention of those interested to what I consider an unwarrantable and highly dangerous rate of speed over the worst portion of the road, which I suppose might be reduced to a point consistent with absolute safety, and the lost time recovered on the easy grades and slight curvatures of the road through the beautiful vallies of the Susquehanna.

YONKERS, Aug. 11, 1858.

Reception of Secretary Toucey in Hartford.

The Hon. ISAAC TOUCEY, Secretary of the Navy, had a public reception at Hartford on Wednesday. The Times says:

"Nearly an hour before the cars arrived, thousands of people flocked to the depôt, and the numbers were constantly augmented till Gov. TOUCEY arrived. Many hundreds preceded the line of escort, and rallied around the place of his residence, before his arrival. As soon as the cars entered the station-house, a signal rocket was sent up, and this was immediately followed by the firing of canon.

Governor TOUCEY was met at the cars by a number of his friends, and conducted to an open carriage standing in front of the line of Armory Guards and the Band. The Guards then formed a line of march, the carriage following. The people, to the number of thousands, sent up the most hearty cheers.

Here the Hon. WM. W. EATON addressed Gov. TOUCEY. He said that in behalf of his fellow-citizens he welcomed him to his home. It was no party movement. But your fellow-citizens have come here, (said Mr. E.) to pay their respects to you on your arrival at the city of your residence.

Governor TOUCEY said he thanked his fellow-citizens for this cordial welcome. After so long an absence, to return home, to find himself in the midst of his friends and neighbors, and to be welcomed by them with such manifestations of regard, filled him with gratitude which no words could express. He could not look on the demonstration before him unmoved. His grateful feelings responded to the tokens of personal friendship and regard which were so strongly expressed by those who had assembled to greet him this evening. But, gentlemen, this manifestation of feeling cannot be on my account. It is due to the great Statesman who now occupies the Presidential chair. It is not for me to speak of the measures of his Administration—of the caution, the prudence, the wisdom, the firmness, and the consummate ability with which he has devised and executed them. The cool and wise judgment, and firm purpose to administer the Government for the welfare of the whole country, commands your respect, and you express it here this evening. His Administration you know has been thus far eminently successful. The exciting Kansas question, which seemed to be alienating the good relations of the two great sections of our common country, has been settled. The perplexing difficulties in Utah, where civil war was threatened, have also been adjusted, and happily without bloodshed. The great question of the right of search, on which we fought the battles of the war of 1812, and which had never been abandoned by England till the present time, has now been conclusively and forever settled. The claim that a foreign national vessel may search the decks and cabins of our merchant ships, is now unequivocally abandoned; and never again will any foreign power presume, I trust, to set foot upon the deck of an American merchantman, under the plea of a right to do so. That annoying and unjust claim, till now practically enforced by our Transatlantic neighbors, has been stricken from the record of the civilized nations of the earth, under the firm, just, and enlightened policy of our present Chief Magistrate.

Gentlemen, I may mingle my congratulations with your own, and the congratulations of the civilized world, on the successful termination of the great enterprise of laying the Atlantic Telegraph Cable—an enterprise in which two great nations have participated.

Permit me again to thank you for the manifestations of regard which you have extended to me this evening. I intend to remain in this city a few days, and during my stay shall be gratified, my fellow-citizens, to take you by the hand." [Loud cheers.]

[illegible]

From the London Saturday Review.

In most cases it is right to let evil of a certain kind alone. Blasphemy and obscenity are not cured by being talked about; and simply to review the literature of Holywell-street does no good. But this is because it is at our own doors; and, moreover, it illustrates nothing. Here, in England, people are not filthy and profligate upon principle; and no one since SHELLEY openly rejects, and preaches the rejection of, marriage, upon philosophical and moral, if not religious grounds. But in America the case is different. We may talk of morals beyond the Atlantic much as we do of the social state of Pompeii and China. Distance scarcely lends enchantment to the view; but scene, place, people and subject are foreign to us. We speculate on the dirt of WALT WHITMAN much as we look at certain Greek epigrams. The evil does not come home to us—it is altogether ab extra. Our justification for what we are about to produce is complete if we simply remark that the Free-Lovers' Convention was held in New-York, and not in England. But there is a further reason for taking the matter up. We have in this country the seeds of what has produced Dead Sea apples elsewhere. The Free-Lovers' Convention is the full development of Spiritualism and the Woman's Rights movement, and both these crazes have found entrance among ourselves. We certainly do not anticipate that either the one or the other will go the American length in this sober, stupid country. We are much slower in working a principle to its logical results than other men; and, to do them simple justice, we are not going to charge such persons as Mr. WILKINSON or Mrs. CROSBELAND, or the fair philosophers of the Englishwoman's Magazine, with either the free thought or the yet freer language of the Free-Lovers. Still, it is well that these respectable, and we believe high-minded, people should know what comes of the religion and the reforms which they advocate. They are strong-minded enough not to be hurt by the exposure. Shocked we trust they will be; but they want shocking. In cases of social and moral paralysis, a good electric battery is wanted to bring the system into healthy action. Mr. LAING some years ago informed the world of the existence and practice of the Prussian sect of Muckers, and his exposure did good. We are therefore thankful to a Liverpool paper for transcribing the acts of the Synod of Free-Lovers; for, like any other Council or Synod, the Fraternity or Society of the Free-Lovers' Convention enunciates its Articles of Faith—if that can be called a creed which only proposes to believe nothing. The confession ranges over all things, human and divine, for the express purpose of expunging both humanity and divinity from its credenda and agenda. But quotation is better and safer in this case than paraphrase, and we accordingly copy a few extracts from our Liverpool contemporary:

"1. The authority of each individual soul is absolute and final in deciding all questions as to what is true or false in principle, or right or wrong in practice.

3. That the phenomena of Spiritualism have demonstrated the fact that an actual intercourse between embodied and disembodied human spirits is both possible and actual; that the conviction of this actuality * * * * conduces to the inauguration of the only authority consistent with the human soul.

6. That the sacred and important right of Woman is to decide for herself how often, and under what circumstances, she shall assume the responsibility of maternity.

7. That nothing is true or right, and nothing is false or wrong, because it is sanctioned or condemned by the Bible.

9. * * * * all laws authorizing or sustaining private property in land * * * * are as unjust as would be any laws compelling men and women to pay for air.

15. That the time and devotion spent on religious services can confer no benefit on an Infinite and Independent Power, and can therefore be no virtue."

The fifth resolution caused considerable debate. Unless we mistake its genesis, it embodies the language of Swedenborgianism, from which Spiritualism has been derived. It stands thus:

"5. That the only true and natural marriage is an exclusive conjugal love between one man and one woman; and that the only true home is the isolated home based upon this exclusive love."

Of course this resolution means nothing, because the conjugal love defined need not consist in a permanent tie. Indeed, it seems to have been understood in this sense; for Mrs. BRANCH, of New-York, who is described as "the leading spirit of the Free-Lovers," at once detected the weak point, and opened her oration by declaring that, "to her mind, this resolution meant nothing." Still she was bound not to let the equivocation pass; and as she was "one who dared to look the marriage question in the face, and openly to denounce the marriage institution as the sole cause of woman's degradation and misery," she spoke out, and did look the question in the face:

"To the marriage ceremony woman is indebted for her wrongs, for her aching heart, her chains, her slavery. * * * * You speak of woman's right to labor, her right to teach, her right to vote, and lastly, though not least, her right to get married; but do you say anything about her right to love when she will, where she will, and whom she will? Your resolution stipulates that she is to have an isolated home with an exclusive conjugal love. This is very pretty in sentiment * * * but it will not do for practical life. * * * * Just as woman is free in her thoughts, her affections, making her home wherever she chooses, just so will her children be brave. * * * * It is the binding marriage ceremony that keeps woman degraded in mental and moral slavery. She must demand her freedom, * * * her right to bear children when she will, and to whom she will. * * * * I believe in the absolute freedom of the affections, and that it is woman's privilege—ay, her right—to accept or refuse any love that comes to her. * * * * I wish the resolution to be put in a more definite form, stating what conjugal love is, and to how few or how many an isolated household may be limited."

JOEL TIFFANY, of Ohio, "indulged in some very plain-spoken remarks," and observed that "free-love was but another name for free-lust"—an observation which must have struck Mrs. BRANCH as coarse. Mr. EVANS, however, "a Shaker, hailing from Lebanon," made amends for this single slip into decency and common sense, and approved of Mrs. BRANCH'S views, upon the high religious ground that "God is male and female, a dual being," and he then went on with considerable superfluity, to explain that "he did not believe the Bible to be the Word of God." Mr. CURTIS, of Philadelphia, announces that he intends to practice what others preach:

"He married himself to his wife, and she married herself to me * * * not that God sanctified it—we did not want God in the matter—not that it was sanctioned by magistrate or priest * * * and when we married we expressed that sentiment; and when we agree to separate, we shall accomplish that separation, without the help of God, or priest or magistrate—we don't want the consent of either of the three—we do not want to be united because God unites us, and we will not be separated because God separates us."

If we were inclined to be learned on this matter we should say that we had heard a good deal of this before. ARISTOPHANES, in certain naughty plays, has anticipated the best or worst part of this view of woman's rights, which we suppose existed, or it would hardly have been satirized, in Athens. In one, he especially introduces the Convention's view of woman's right to decide "how often she is to assume the responsibility of maternity." The Manicheans, or at least some Gnostics, held something very like the Shaker's theory of a male and female god. The Empire of the Nairs, which perhaps never existed, is represented as much the same with Mrs. BRANCH'S free-and easy polygamy and polyandry. Mr. MADAN'S Thelyphthora was in the same direction, against the immorality of the perpetuity of marriage. JOHN of Leyden and the Munster fanatics combined socialism and a community of the sexes much in the same way, and Mr. PERCY SHELLEY, and his mother-in-law and father-in-law, preached on the same text. The chief novelty about Mrs. BRANCH is her style. She speaks remarkably well. We cannot refuse our admiration to her terse, epigrammatic, biting manner of speech. She is skillful in the art of condensation. Close, clear, and pointed in her famous saying. It is Woman's Rights resolved into its prima materia. She declares her right "to bear children when she will and to whom she will,"—her right "to accept or refuse any love that comes to her"—her right "to love when she will, where she will and whom she will." This is exhaustive—it embraces, as Mrs. BRANCH is nobly prepared to do, the whole human race. It is the very pemmican of insolence and nastiness. The only thing that strikes us as at all strange is, that with these views Mrs. BRANCH and the Free Lovers should go about sermonizing and speech-making on this very common every-day matter. Here in London, unless its reputation is sadly belied, this lady's theory is reduced to daily or nightly practice. This sort of marriage is as old as history and experience. It completely fulfills Mrs. BRANCH'S definition. In Norton street and Wych-street there are those "who accept or refuse any love that comes to them," and who not only claim but exercise their right "to love when they will, whom they will and where they will." So much for the fact; and with this before us we can only recommend Mrs. BRANCH—though very likely she does not require any such suggestion—to be the great example which she paints. It would be infinitely more honest than her present social position. One difficulty alone presents itself to our thorough comprehension of woman's rights, as thus eloquently and intelligibly announced. If woman has the right "to love whom she will," it follows, as rights and duties are correlative, that there must be a power in woman to enforce her rights. TARQUIN'S crime is, of course, by this definition, impossible; and, as among the Free Lovers everything changes places, we cannot but ask whether LUCRETIA is to take TARQUIN'S place? If so, it is high time to inaugurate a Man's Rights Convention. Force must meet force.

[illegible]

The Albany Atlas and Argus discourses of steam on the Canals:

"A tug of very moderate size might, by the use of several wheels adapted to the occasion, by a very simple mechanical contrivance, acquire a tractile power sufficient to draw a train of Canal-boats as numerous as the cars that follow a locomotive on a railway. The rate of progress would not be much greater than is at present allowed; but speed is not the main object of canal navigation, while economy is; and in water transportation the economy of force used is in the inverse ratio of the speed.

The question of "Steam on the Canals" must be treated as a practical one. It is not intended to be the theme of foolish speeches and electioneering small-talk. The men who are to make the application will conform the use of steam to the condition of the Canal, and not wait for the Canal to be adapted to the new boats. The childish proposition of Mr. RUGGLES,

'To lift up the bridges as high as the sky,
To let King John and his courtiers pass by,'

would be absurd and extravagant.

There is no necessity for a perpendicular smoke-pipe on such a steamboat. In a recent steam-carriage for common highways, the steam and smoke are discharged downwards in front. This is the most trivial of all the obstacles to steam on the Canals."

A Fatal Storm.

From the Joliet (Ill.) Democrat, 7th.

On last Saturday evening we were visited by one of the most terrific thunder-storms we have ever witnessed. The rain poured down in perfect torrents for hours, and the heavens were in a perfect blaze of lightning, the thunder rolled incessantly in deafening peals, and appeared to shake the very foundations of the earth.

We learn that the house of a Mr. POWELL in the town of Washington, in this County, was struck, and Mrs. POWELL instantly killed, and Mr. POWELL and several of the family so severely injured that their lives are despaired of. The clothing of the children was set on fire, and they were too much shocked to put it out, until after they were severely burned.

We have learned of damage being done to property in various places, but nothing very serious. Within the city limits, the lightning struck in as many as twenty different places, without, however, doing any very serious damage. HOWE, HYDE & Co.'s mills, HUNT & WARD'S planing mill, the Rock Island Railroad bridge, the dwellings of Messrs. M'NEIF and MOLLOY, Mrs. TULLOCK'S barn, the old Exchange Hotel, besides numerous other buildings, were struck, and slightly injured. Four cows, in different parts of the city, were killed. A horse hitched to a telegraph pole near PARK & ELWOOD'S office, was knocked down three or four times, when it was discovered that a small wire came down the pole from the main one to within a few inches of the horse. We heard several horses were killed on the tow-path, and a pair of mules were so much frightened that they jumped into the river, and were carried over the dam and drowned.

The Canadian Election—Durey McGee.

From the Toronto Colonist.

The contest in Toronto goes on bravely. At the moment we write, the Catholics are divided. They are half disposed to start a candidate of their own, which is perhaps really the best thing they can do. Mr. CAMERON states his views with a bluntness almost amounting to a fault. The contrast, however, in this regard between him and the Church-street party does him good, in so far as it shows he is not finessing to get office. The electors should keep the fact steadily before them that their late representative was too easily caught by Mr. MCGEE to be reliable; and, in addition to this, they must not overlook the fact, that in a plain political bargain, he was completely overmatched by a French Bishop only five or six years in the country. We must have more skill, not to say anything of honesty, in our next representative.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1858.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, with London [illegible] advices to the 31st of July, arrived [illegible] yesterday morning, and her mails, dis[illegible] south in the early train, reached this City [illegible]. Some details of the news telegraphed from Halifax, will be found elsewhere, [illegible] that little additional intelligence in our foreign [illegible].

Beyond the fact that signals are successfully and constantly passing over the Atlantic Cable, perhaps Trinity Bay and Valentia, nothing definite is known relative to the operation of the electricity at present having control of the wire. It is impossible therefore to say with any certainty when the public mind will be satisfied with the reception of the first message. Nothing is known, except by Professor WHITEHOUSE and his assistants, relative to the progress made in working his receiving instruments, but from the delay already experienced, it is feared that they cannot be worked satisfactorily. No doubt, is entertained, however, that with the Hughes' instrument all obstacles will be overcome.

Preparations for the contemplated operations against the hostile Indians in Washington and Oregon Territories are proceeding with all possible speed. An efficient military staff is to be immediately organized, and all possible measures are to be taken to prevent a repetition of such disasters as that experienced by Col. STEPTOE. It is the determination of the Secretary of War to make the Indians in these localities fully sensible of the power of the Federal Government.

The President and suite left Bedford Springs for Washington yesterday morning. He stopped at Chambersburg last night.

The Empire Grain Elevator at Oswego, owned by GARDNER & RAYMOND, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning, together with 60,000 bushels of grain. Total loss estimated at $75,000.

There were 45 deaths from yellow-fever in New-Orleans on Wednesday last.

A public meeting, though not a large one, was held yesterday evening at Peck-slip, for the purpose of putting on record an expression of the popular hostility to the proposed suppression of the Peck-slip Ferry. Ex-Mayor HARPER presided, a few speeches were made, and a series of resolutions embodying the views of the originators of the meeting were offered, and adopted unanimously.

On Tuesday afternoon a disgraceful personal attack was made at the Mayor's office upon Ex-Recorder JAMES SMITH, by one of the Mayor's Police, named HILLIARD, who struck that gentleman a violent blow in the face, and then suddenly left the court room. The details of the transaction will be found in another column. When the Mayor returned, having been absent for a brief space, and the facts were investigated, he suspended HILLIARD both from pay and duty, and ordered him to find bail in $2,000 for the assault. Another officer named HALL, was also suspended from pay and duty on the same charge.

A German, named GOTTLIEB MAYENWEACHER, was found dead in his bed at his residence, No. 10 Avenue A, Saturday morning. He had been badly beaten the evening previous in a row at the grocery store, No. 20 Avenue A, and his death is attributed to the violence he then received. A post-mortem examination of the body was made yesterday, and the brain was found to be compressed, which compression was declared to be the result of external violence. The parties who [illegible] the assault have not yet been arrested, although warrants for their arrest have been issued. The Coroner will to-day make an investigation of the case.

RALPH H. BEEAN, broker in Fulton-street, was arrested yesterday on his arrival in town in a New-Haven train, charged with being the principal forgerer of signatures upon Mr. FREDRICKS, the Photographic in Broadway, already noticed in the TIMES. Mr. BEEAN gave bail to the amount of $10,000 to answer the charge preferred against him.

The Young Men's Democratic Union Club met last evening at the Mercer House, and appointed a committee to make arrangements for serenading OGDEN W. FIELD and Captain HUNDLEY, on their arrival in this City.

The Commissioners of Health met yesterday, and ordered the City Inspector to abate the nuisance of swine kept in several localities in the upper part of the City.

A meeting of the citizens of Brooklyn favorable to the construction of an opera house in that city, was held Thursday evening. Several addresses were made by prominent citizens, and a committee of twenty was appointed to take the necessary preliminary steps to carry the project into effect.

MICHAEL DOYLE, baggage-master on the Long Island Railroad, was almost instantly killed Thursday afternoon by a car passing over him. He leaves a widow and one child.

The trade in Flour, yesterday, was less vigorous, and prices favored buyers. A lively inquiry prevailed for Southern at former rates, and for Corn, which has been freely offered, and was cheaper. Cotton was in moderate demand at uniform figures. Rice and Sugars were more active; the latter closed a shade higher, having fully recovered from the effects of the late unfavorable reaction. Rye Hearing was brisk and firm. Provisions were quiet, as are also Freights.

GEORGE VAN PUNDT LIBRARIES.—There is a very large class of literary laborers in this City composed of students and writers, men who depend directly upon literature for their means. It is to this class that the large public libraries are as much a necessity as banks are to merchants. The books of reference, which are so necessary to the literary laborer, can only be obtained in our large libraries. To deprive these literary work-people of their libraries, is to deprive them in a great measure of their means of support, and the public of the benefit of their talents. Yet every one of our public libraries is now closed, and will remain so during the month of August. The Astor, the Mercantile, the Historical, and the Society Libraries, are all inaccessible to the student, and their precious stores are rendered of no avail to those for whose use they were specially intended. The excuse for closing these storehouses of information is, that the librarians need a Summer holiday, and the apartments require cleaning. But such a reason as this might, with just as much propriety, be given for closing all the banks and insurance in working order. The public are becoming impatient for the Queen's message, and the pent-up enthusiasm of the people will consume itself unless an opportunity shall be offered soon for its ventilation. Those who have not laid in their stock of candles and tar barrels for the grand illumination, might better hold on for a while longer.

Another Romance of the Peerage.

A new and interesting question is soon to come before the House of Lords for decision—to wit: whether a right to a seat in their Chamber can be claimed by reason of the ownership of a particular piece of landed estate? It is well known to all persons conversant with such matters, that the Duke of NORFOLK is said to hold his earldom of Arundel by virtue of his possession of the castle of that name; but, as he does not claim his seat in the Lords by virtue of that dignity, the question has never been raised as to whether it would be sufficient for the purpose. Another of these peerages by tenure, and, we believe, the only other one, is the Barony of Berkeley, claimed to inhere in the possessor of the famous castle by the Severn, through whose roofs rung "the shrieks of an agonizing king," when EDWARD II. was cruelly murdered there in 1327. For two hundred years and more after the Norman Conquest all peers summoned to give counsel to the king were such by virtue of their fiefs, or landed estates, held of the Crown. The Castle of Berkeley was bestowed upon the first Baron by HENRY II., and the Empress MAUD, about the year 1150, and by reason of that tenure, he and his successors were called to the Royal counsels for about one hundred and fifty years. About the close of the thirteenth century, peers began to be summoned to Westminster by writ, and in 1295 the then Baron of BERKELEY received his summons of this kind. And, we apprehend, the decision of the question will depend upon whether it is decided that he waived his right by tenure by acknowledging the sufficiency of the writ; and whether, if he did, it could affect the rights of his successors.

The London Times, in treating of this subject, says that no decision has ever been made on this point. This is undoubtedly true, as far as a formal settlement of the matter as a legal question is concerned. But there is a material circumstance in the history of the Berkeley Peerage which the Times passes over. The Castle of Berkeley and the seat in the House of Lords descended regularly to the seventh Lord, WILLIAM, who was created Marquis of BERKELEY by HENRY VII. He dying in 1491 without heirs male, and having a quarrel with his brother, the next in succession, bequeathed his castle of Berkeley to the king and his heirs male, failing which it was to return to the next of his own blood. By virtue of this devise the castle was vested in the Crown, and the rightful barons, if they derived their right from the writ of summons to their ancestor, kept out of their seats in the Lords until the death of EDWARD VI. in 1553, when the castle reverted to the descendant of the Marquis' brother, who immediately assumed the dignity and privileges of the Baron of BERKELEY, without debate, as the possessor of that estate. Now, if the Marquis of BERKELEY could divest his next of blood of the peerage, by devising to the king the castle of Berkeley, and if the one revived again with the falling-in of the reversion of the other, it would seem as if a precedent were established for the present distress. If the Marquis could give his castle to the king, and with it the barony attached to it, both of which again returned to his next heir on the termination of the estate created by his will, why could not the late Earl of BERKELEY devise the peerage with the castle to his eldest son—of whom presently—even if he were born out of wedlock, and so to his second son, the present claimant?

The late Earl, being the fourth Earl and twenty-third Baron of BERKELEY, succeeded to his titles and estates in 1755, and in 1785 formed a connection, matrimonial or otherwise, with a Miss MARY COLE—a person of a humble condition in life—and had by her six children previous to 1796. In that year, whether to make assurance doubly sure, or because it had not been made sufficiently so, the ceremony of marriage was performed between them, and several children were born unto them thereafter. In 1810, the Earl died, and his eldest son, born in 1786, who had always borne the courtesy title of Viscount DUSSLEY, and had been member of Parliament for Gloucester under that style, applied to be admitted to a seat in the Lords. On a full hearing, it was determined that the marriage of the late Earl in 1785, was not established by sufficient evidence, and that the children born previous to 1796 "came somewhat sauctly into the world," and were not legally heritable. The Earldom was decreed to THOMAS MORTON BERKELEY, the son first born after the marriage in 1796. He, however, has never assumed the title, not caring to smirch the fame of his mother, or to brand his elder brothers with bastardy. The eldest son dropped his courtesy title of Lord DUSSLEY, and sunk into plain Colonel BERKELEY, which handle to his name he derived from his commanding the South Gloucestershire Militia. The Castle of Berkeley, however, and his large landed estates—the late Earl perhaps suspecting the flaw which would be found in his legal title—were settled upon his eldest son, and so forward upon his sons in succession. So Colonel BERKELEY had the estates to comfort him for the loss of the title. He was a famous man in the days of the Regency—a friend doubtless of the Marquis of Steyne and of Major Pendennis—great on the turf, and in all sporting directions, and notorious by his connection with the beautiful actress MARIA FOOTE, now Countess-Dowager of HARRINGTON, by whom he had a family of children. In 1831, he was made Lord SEGRAVE, and eight years later, Earl FITZHARDINGE.

In the course of 1857 he died, unmarried, and the Castle of Berkeley and the other estates passed, according to their father's settlement, to the next brother, Sir MAURICE BERKELEY, K. C. B., a Vice-Admiral, and at that time one of the Lords of the Admiralty, and M. P. for Gloucester. He resigned this place and retired from Parliament, on the ground, as we infer, that he was legally entitled to a seat in the House of Lords, as Earl of BERKELEY, and so incompetent in law to a seat belonging by right, or to a post belonging by usage, to a commoner. Since then Sir MAURICE has made his claim to be called to Parliament as Baron BERKELEY, by virtue of his tenure of the castle, and this claim is now under consideration. It is not the first time it has been stirred. Near two hundred years ago, the then Lord BERKELEY demanded the precedence which the great of the castle to his ancestor would give him, and the claim was quieted by making him Earl of BERKELEY. We are informed by the Times of what had occupied our notice or our memory, that Colonel BERKELEY proposed making the same claim, and that it was to avoid this perplexity, among other things, that he was created successively Baron SEGRAVE and Earl FITZHARDINGE. Whether the demand of the present claimant will be settled in the same way, or whether the House of Lords will come up squarely to the question and set it at rest on its legal merits, we shall very soon know. There are two material things involved in this decision. First, should the House allow Sir MAURICE BERKELEY's claim, he would be placed at the head of the Barenage of England, the grant of Berkeley Castle, on which it would depend, being more than a century anterior to the summons of the first Baron DE ROS, whose representative is now the Premier Baron. And, secondly, as his peerage is an incident of the possession of the castle, he, or any of his successors, can make the Premier Baron of England out of any BROWN, JONES, or ROBINSON, to whom he may convey the estate in which the dignity inheres. So it will be seen that its consequences, as well as its odd character, make this question one of importance as well as of curiosity.

Colleges Made Easy—How to Make Them Respectable.

Every person has heard of the "Regents of the University" in this State; but few persons are aware of the duties which devolve on that Board. The position has been regarded as a mere compliment bestowed by the Legislature from time to time on some retired politician or literary man. The truth is that this Board has a very important power vested in it. Besides the receipt of reports from all the literary institutions above the grade of Common Schools, and the distribution of the literary fund to academies, they have the right to charter Colleges, a right which they have judiciously refused to exercise except in cases where the applicants show themselves possessed of property to the amount of at least $100,000. This is little enough with which to start an institution, professing to give instruction in all the departments of mathematics, languages, chemistry, natural philosophy, moral philosophy and metaphysics, and to confer degrees which amount to a certificate that the recipient has a good elementary knowledge of all these subjects. But the action of the Regents has been nullified by the action of the Legislature in granting charters to almost all who ask. The consequence is that every Academy which has achieved for itself a reputation as such, is becoming ambitious of assuming a higher title. The St. Lawrence Academy becomes the St. Lawrence University, and immediately besieges the Legislature for an appropriation to give it a start. The Alfred Academy is in like manner turned into the Alfred University, and the LeRoy Institute also assumes some pretentious name.

Now, when it is remembered that our old Colleges of a century's standing, have as yet barely reached a respectable position as compared with the Universities of the Old World, it is utterly absurd to suppose that these mushroom institutions, and such as these, can by any possibility take rank at once by the side of others with which they claim to compete.

That they do not offer such facilities to students in the immediate neighborhood as to furnish an argument in their favor on that score, is shown by the small number of graduates which even the best of them turn out at their annual commencements.

The Legislature was at one time in the habit of making an annual appropriation of $6600 a year, out of the Literature Fund, to each of certain Institutions, and this was justified on the ground that Union and other Colleges had in former days received large aid from the State, and their infant sisters claimed to be placed on a similar footing.

But these appropriations were first reduced in amount and then refused altogether, the number of newly chartered concerns which claimed a participation being so great as to leave but the merest stipend for each.

While these so-called Universities are thus multiplying, we have no well-known Etons to qualify students for admission to the College course.

In New-Hampshire and Massachusetts the Exeter and Andover Academies have occupied this position, and, as preparatory schools, have attained more distinction than they ever could have acquired as Colleges.

The complaint most generally made at Yale and Princeton is, that candidates for admission are imperfectly fitted on some one or other of the preparatory studies.

No greater drawback can be imposed upon a student's progress than to be obliged to "catch up" with his classmates on branches with which he ought to have been familiar before he entered.

Let the Regents of the University look to this. They may, by judicious action as visitors, bring about a more thorough and systematic training in the Academies on those studies which are preparatory to a College course. They may and should never weary of urging upon the Legislature the impropriety of interference by that body with their action.

If Colleges are to be chartered hereafter with the same disregard of their ability to do what they profess, we would better abolish the Board of Regents as a useless concern, and pass a general law authorizing every Academy which aspires to the name to turn itself into a College.

The Canal Steam Trip.

Governor KING, and the Commissioners who accompanied him, have returned from their excursion to Buffalo, and the public owe them thanks for their interest in the success of steam as a motive-power on the canals. With the results of the trial they expressed themselves satisfied; and, as we think, with sufficient reason. From the information before us, and still more from the opinions of the gentlemen who witnessed the experiment, we think it may be confidently assumed that steam on the canal is a success. But it should be remembered that much remains to be done and learned. Difficulties may be expected to present themselves, and discouragements to arise. The prism of the canal is not yet at its full size. It lacks a foot of the depth designed for it, and a foot more or less water in the canal makes a world of difference. The banks may require slope walls throughout. Such walls they should have, steam or no steam: but to construct them takes time and money. The Winter, however, affords opportunity for all improvements of this kind, and they should be made permanently, not in the slipshod manner which has been too common. It remains to be determined how the cost of steam-towing compares with horse-power; how great a rate of speed may be safe; whether it will be more profitable to use tugs, or to place an engine in each boat; whether the locks should be lengthened to allow of larger loads and increased sharpness of bows, with many other questions that must present themselves to the minds of practical canal men.

It is difficult for those who are not familiar with the canals to realize their capacity for usefulness and their value to the State. The community has been educated for ten years past, by railroad advocates, to believe that the day of canal business had gone by. They were pointed to the extensive freighting and superior speed of the railroads, till they honestly began to believe water conveyance an obsolete idea. Never was there a greater mistake. Even under the slow system of horse-towing the cheapness of canal transportation would protect it against any fair competition. But when loaded boats can average five or six miles an hour, or even four, the position of the canal is unassailable. We shall look to the forwarders and boatmen for all practicable improvements in the use of steam. The present season is, it is true, well advanced; but enough has been accomplished to create confidence and excite ambition. During the Fall and Winter we shall expect ingenuity and enterprise to be busy, so that the navigation of 1859 may be a new era in canal history. Those who succeed in practically and profitably placing steam on the Erie Canal will render the State a service scarcely less than that of its illustrious originator.

A JEW IN PARLIAMENT.—The Churchman, which is a leading religious newspaper of the High Church Episcopal stamp, bewails, in an article which we copy this morning, the recent vote in the House of Lords, by which Baron ROTHSCHILD has been admitted to sit in Parliament. American readers will, we think, be somewhat surprised by the tone of the Churchman's jeremiad. It would seem as if England, "our mother," had been disgracing herself in some unheard of way, and not merely doing what we ourselves do continually. Because she at length allows Jews to have seats in the House of Commons the Churchman pronounces her "a whited sepulchre," declares her Christianity "a sham," and charges that she has "crucified her Lord afresh."

Now, we cannot but think that the Churchman is squandering its wrath in vain. Neither the liberties nor the religion of England can be placed in jeopardy by the few Israelites who will sit in Parliament. And we venture to say, with diffidence indeed, yet we give it as our opinion—that there are many men in Parliament who possess not a whit more Christianity than the Baron ROTHSCHILD.

The New Southern Mail-Route—Trouble at New-Orleans.

From the New-Orleans Bee, 7th.

Some weeks ago the new mail contract, in virtue of which the Great Eastern mail was to be transported by the Mississippi Central and Jackson Railroads from New-York to New-Orleans in four days and seventeen hours, went into operation. We cannot say positively whether the mail has ever once arrived within schedule time, but this we do know, that it has never been distributed at the Post-Office in our city and received by our citizens in less than six days, which was the usual period of transportation under the old schedule. It appears that there are two impediments to the rigorous fulfilment of the contract, both of which, we should imagine, might be readily obviated. The first is a delay of twelve hours occurring at a point called Goodman's Station, on the Mississippi Central Road, about twenty miles north of Canton. The mail-bags reach Goodman's Station at 6 o'clock P. M., and are there detained until 6 o'clock the next morning. In consequence of the absence of a night train, thus causing a loss of twelve hours. When the mail arrives at New-Orleans, Post-Office hours are over. The Postmaster affirms—no doubt correctly—that the amount allowed him for contingent expenses is insufficient to justify the employment of night clerks; that he cannot require his employes to labor longer than from sunrise to sunset; and that, consequently, as the Great Eastern mail is brought to the city by the cars of the Jackson Railroad after 6 o'clock in the evening, it must necessarily await distribution until the next morning. Thus it happens that our citizens are subjected to a further delay of twelve hours, entailing the loss of an entire day and night, and precluding them from obtaining their papers and correspondence till fully six days from the time of the departure of the New-York mail. Practically, therefore, the sole improvement thus far obtained by the new contract is the regularity of mail transportation. Nothing whatever is gained in time.

The obstacles to which we have alluded are so far from being insurmountable that they can be easily overcome by the display of a little energy on the part of the Postmaster-General. As the parties taking the contract have bound themselves to bring the Great Eastern and New-Orleans mail in four days and seventeen hours, they should be compelled to comply with their agreement, or to forfeit the contract.

[The trouble with this new route seems to be confined to the return trip from the North. From New-Orleans to this point, the arrangement operates fairly; at least, the improvement over the plan formerly in operation is very decided. No mail has yet come through to this City from New-Orleans in four days and seventeen hours, but we have papers regularly in the space of five days and a-half from city to city. For instance, New-Orleans papers of Sunday, Aug. 8, were received in our office yesterday morning—Friday, 13. At this time last year, we were fortunate if we had a through Southern mail in eight days. Still, if the contractors agree to make the time in four days and seventeen hours, they should be held to their bargain. EDITOR TIMES.]

Jones' Wood Festival.

The renewed festivities commenced here yesterday, and considering that a repetition of a success is always a dangerous thing to attempt, and still more difficult to consummate, the attendance was good. At all events it was not expected that it would be better. The entertainments were excellent, including a change of programme, and a new march by Mr. ARX, and a battle potpourri by Mr. STRODE, on a new and popular plan, with bands all over the garden, and fireworks to illustrate the composer's ideas. Every thing passed off in an admirable manner. The Festival will come to an end to-night, when there will be a finer display of fireworks than was possible on any other day. It is determined that the thing shall end brilliantly. On Sunday there will be a grand Sacred Concert, with all the instrumental forces and the choral societies. Selections will be given from the "Messiah," by HANDEL; "St. Paul," by MENDELSSOHN; "Stabat Mater," by ROSSINI; together with "Luther's Hymn, Miserere," by VERDI, and other well-approved and appropriate pieces. We are desired by the management to state that the Telegraphic piece is in readiness, and will positively be fired to-night.

A DISPATCH FROM EUROPE AT LAST.—With the last arrival at this port from Europe, there came a gentleman whose friends called him, "My Lord," and who deported himself like an English nobleman. He is, indeed, a peer of the Queen's realm, it is said. He "put up" at the St. Nicholas Hotel. The distinguished stranger made no secret of his intimacy with Mr. DALLAS, and even went so far as to say that our Minister at the Court of St. James was "blasted clever;" the latter had actually promised, at their last interview to send him a dispatch by the Submarine Telegraph, immediately after the Queen's message to the President should be transmitted, and inform him of the precise state of the English pulse with regard to the success of the great enterprise. Those who heard his Lordship talking thus, listened with a great deal of deference; none of them said aught that in the remotest degree appeared to indicate that their opinion of him was otherwise than exalted; not by the most delicate hint or attenuated innuendo was any suggestion thrown out that might be construed or contorted into the idea that the Englishman was considered a "sell." His Lordship thought this a very great country and he was betrayed to find phrases in his vernacular sufficiently eclectic of its enterprising people. Were enough at midnight, last Thursday night, a telegraphic dispatch, ad-

[illegible] to his Lordship was presented. He [illegible] his hat, as his lordship was unacquainted [illegible] Lord [illegible] immediately. His Lordship [illegible] his room, and [illegible] Whether his Lordship was "hob nobbing" with some friends, or "fraternizing" with the God of Sleep, is the question future, has not transpired. Certain it is, however, that he opened his door with alacrity, and his mouth and eyes with overjoyed surprise, when he was informed that the Transatlantic Submarine Electric Telegraph dispatch from the American Minister, the second telegram over the wires—had arrived, and was there under his nose waiting to be opened! As soon as his Lordship had paid to the Messenger of the Telegraph Company, who was waiting, and entitled to him (his Lordship) the paltry, the trifling sum of $25 75. Need we say that the transmitted News paid the price of the transportation of his dispatch immediately? Need we say that he retired into his room and shut himself up to the enjoyment of his treasure? Need we say that he did not make his appearance in public until a late hour the next day? And is it necessary to state that when he did appear he was overflowing with indignation at the author of the vile imposition? Is it necessary to say that, like a true John Bull, he prefers English "wooden walls," and everything else English, to any American hoax? Is it necessary to say anything more?

Public Demonstration Against the Proposed Abolition of Peck-slip Ferry—Meeting of Indignant Citizens.

Yesterday evening, in accordance with public notice, a meeting was held at Peck-slip, for the purpose of giving expression to the views of those citizens who are opposed to the suppression of the Ferry from Peck-slip to Williamsburg, a proposal now before the Board of Aldermen, on a resolution which has been offered to that effect.

The meeting was by no means large, though the public convenience and popular taste had both been considered—the one in the erection of a spacious platform, the other, in providing an excellent band.

At about 8½ o'clock Mr. FIELD, director of a bank in Williamsburg, advanced, and nominated for President the Hon. JAMES HARPER, ex-Mayor.

This was carried nem. con.

The following Vice-Presidents and Secretaries were appointed on motion of Mr. REID:

Vice-Presidents—Isaac T. Frost, Esq., Col. Richard French, James Kelly, Esq., Bart. Healy, Esq., Geo. Lyons, Esq., Patrick Crowe, Esq., D. Ward, Esq.

Secretaries—D. E. Reeds, Esq., G. W. Tyson, Esq., E. R. Robertson, Esq., N. S. Wilmer, Esq., E. Burrell, Esq., P. Hoeft, Esq.

The President, after some brief introductory remarks, introduced

Mr. FIELD, who made a statement of the benefits to be derived by the public.

Mr. REID then offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we have learned with surprise and alarm, that a resolution has made much progress and is now pending in the Board of Aldermen to lease the slip at the foot of Peck-slip for another purpose than that to which it has been dedicated and used for a lifetime—namely, a ferry to the foot of South Seventh-street, Williamsburg.

Resolved, That we can see in this proposition nothing but wrong and violence—violence to the faith that was pledged in sanctioning the establishment and long continuance of the Peck-slip Ferry, until it has become a public necessity; and wrong, in calculated to cut off a large portion of our own citizens from the advantages which this ferry has secured to them.

Resolved, That we look upon the various pretexts by which this contemplated outrage is sought to be defended, as unworthy the great interests involved, and we earnestly invoke the members of the Board of Aldermen to pause and calmly consider what is asked at their hands.

Resolved, That we are firmly convinced that it will subserve the best interests of New-York, and particularly the eastern section thereof, to promote, by every practicable means, communication with our great suburbs Brooklyn and Williamsburg.

Resolved, That as the lease of Peck-slip Ferry is about to expire, we conceive it to be the duty of Comptroller FLAGG, under the charter of 1857, to offer the lease for ten years from the 1st of May next ensuing, at auction to the highest bidder, securing in such lease such improved ferry accommodations as the progress of the times demands, and we look with confidence to Mr. FLAGG to fearlessly discharge his whole duty in this matter.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed by the Chair to present the views of this meeting to our City authorities.

The Chairman, in rising to put the resolutions, was interrupted by a gentleman from the Eastern Ho, who indulged in some observations disparaging to ferry companies in general and to the concessions about the Peck-slip Ferry Company in particular, as being a wheel within a wheel, and with which, he said, the gentlemen who had been instrumental in getting up this meeting, were themselves connected. For one, he did not think that one cent fare-ing would pay the Company; he was willing, therefore, to pay two or even three cents. (Grin of disgust.) He was satisfied that the meeting did not represent of people in the habit of crossing the Peck-slip Ferry.

Another person came forward, and said that the people did not care a straw about the contending ferry interests; what they wanted was the slip. [Applause.]

The Chairman put the resolutions, which were adopted unanimously. He named the following gentlemen as a Committee: James Kelly, Daniel Ward, Bartholomew Healy, Geo. Lyons, D. E. Reeds.

These nominations were received with applause.

Mr. WARD then presented himself and addressed the crowd. His remarks were already [illegible].

He was followed by Mr. REED who made a [illegible] his statement of the case as between the ferry and the public, and wound up by making a motion to adjourn.

This was put and carried, and amid cries of "Throw them to Gregory LAY," the gentlemen on the platform withdrew, and the crowd, after contributing itself with a fight or two, apparently dispersed for the purpose of landing John, [illegible] wise.

Fracas at the Mayor's Office.

About 1 o'clock on Friday William F. Hilliard, one of the Mayor's Police, had an altercation with Ex-Recorder James Smith, in the Mayor's Office, when Hilliard struck that gentleman a violent blow in the face. The facts may be partly gathered from the evidence of Marshal Stephens, who was present. He deposed as follows:

"I went into the common room to wash my hands, when I was met at the door by Counsellor Smith, who inquired for the Mayor; I answered that he would be in shortly, when Smith and Hilliard took their seats and got in conversation; high words were used by Hilliard, who I called to order; they continued in conversation, and Smith said he "Know Hilliard, and all about him," in a taunting manner; then Hilliard arose quickly from his chair and slapped Smith in the face pretty hard; I was standing at the extreme end of the table, and Officer Hall was sitting between me and Hilliard, whom I had to pass to get to him; I then immediately took hold of him (Hilliard) and put him out of the room, and reported him to the Mayor when he came in."

The account that the Ex-Recorder gives of the rencontre is substantially as follows: That, when he was sitting at the desk waiting to take the testimony in a cause, Hilliard rose and struck him in the face, and before he could rise from his chair, ran from the room. That two suits had been commenced against John Enright, keeper of a hotel in Cedar-street, for assault and battery, one on the part of Officer Hall, and one on the part of Hilliard against him—the last was about 15 days previously—for a violent assault which had been committed by Enright. That yesterday, Enright, Hall and Hilliard had an interview, and after that interview, they called at Mr. Smith's office, when Hilliard said "He had not directed the suit to be commenced." Mr. Smith told him Mr. Gray, his attorney, had prepared the papers, and that he knew nothing about it. He got the papers and on examining them, found that the affidavit was an affidavit in Hall's case. He then said to Mr. Hilliard, "Sir, it is a mistake, Mr. Gray supposed you wanted a suit commenced; this is an affidavit in Hall's case; I will discontinue it immediately." To which he replied, "Do so, if you please." He immediately directed Mr Gray to send notice of discontinuance, which was done. On Friday morning Officer Hall called at his office and said he wanted the suit discontinued against Enright, and asked what the costs were. Mr. Smith told him that he would not have changed anything had the suit gone on, as he considered officers had no money for litigation, but if he had consulted the matter with Enright he might pay him fifteen dollars, which he did, and Mr. Smith gave him the discontinuance. This afternoon Mr. Smith came, as he stated, to the Mayor's Office to attend an examination which has been pending several days, and while waiting for counsel Hall and Hilliard came in. Hilliard said, "They have got a story around that we have settled with Enright for $15, and I want you to give back to Mr. Hall the $15, what he paid you this morning, and I will pay it to you to-morrow morning." Mr. Smith replied, "I can do no such thing, as that is have nothing to do with you. Mr. Hilliard, and Mr. Hall has settled with me." "Why," said Hilliard, "I am perfectly reasonable, you have taken my fee $15?" Mr. Smith said, "I have nothing to do with you; I would not take your word in the matter for fifteen cents; I have settled with Mr. Hall, and transacted." Hilliard then asked, "You mean to take my word for $15?" To which Mr. Smith replied, "I have said all I have to say on the matter; I don't know you in the transaction." He then stated that he was sitting at the time with his hands in his pockets at the table; that Hilliard came up and took hold of him and struck him on the face, and then ran from the room. Smith followed him [illegible]

When the Mayor came in he was [illegible] and also Hall. A complaint was made, and Hilliard was held to bail in $2,000 for the assault.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

[illegible] Working the Cable—Probable Cause of the Delay.

Newfoundland, N. F., Friday, August 13.

All the arrangements for working the cable are [illegible] to the assistants of Professor Morse, the Electrician-in-chief of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, and as all their operations are conducted privately, it is not that signals are successfully passing through the cable from the Telegraph office here to the Telegraph office at Valentia Bay, Ireland, all rumours regarding a different state of things are unfounded. Although it is not known, except to the Electricians immediately connected with the cable, what progress is being made in working Professor Wheatstone's recording instrument, we hazard little in saying that it has been found as yet impossible to work them successfully. No doubt, however, is entertained that the Engineer-in-Chief, when ready, will overcome all difficulties.

St. Johns, N. F., Friday, Aug. 13.

To the repeated inquiries which were made from hour through the day as to the condition of the cable and the probabilities about the reception of the Queen's message, we are unable to return any other answer than that the cable remains all right—the electrical signals passing through its whole length successfully; but that the electricians have not yet completed their arrangements for putting their receiving instruments into operation.

Joint Committee on the Telegraph.

The Joint Committee reassembled on Friday, Alderman Ambrose in the Chair.

Councilman Dean moved that a Committee of two be appointed to confer with the Deputy Superintendent of Repairs and Supplies in relation to executive duties in carrying out the instructions of this Committee. It was agreed on.

The Mayor then entered the apartment, and presented an ode which had just received by him from Mr. Ayer, the author, which was read to the Committee, and received as fine.

Then some of the members of the Harmonic Society were called, and they suggested that, if they were admitted to the portion of the programme they would be able to rehearse in connection with many other Associations, and be about four hundred strong. They stated that a semi-circular platform would be necessary, fronting of the east nave of the Crystal Palace, which the Mayor had already taken steps to secure for the evening occasion. The ode (already published) was accepted.

Mr. Lawson, Secretary of the Newfoundland Telegraph Company, then entered.

The Chairman submitted a resolution in relation to telegraphing the Third Admiral in the British Navy, to accompany the Congress to this City, that he may receive the congratulation of our citizens. Adopted unanimously.

Mr. Webster, Deputy Superintendent of Repairs and Supplies, who has entered the room some time previously, then stated that, as to executive duties, he was willing to assume all orders heretofore given, providing they had been tendered at the lowest estimate; that he would aid, so far as was in his power, in carrying out the views of the Committee. If the Committee would order, he would execute.

A communication was received from the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, desiring an appropriation for their grand torchlight procession, and a deputation was heard on the subject. No definitive action was taken on that matter.

The Secretary was authorized to have a few hundred copies of the ode printed for the use of rehearsal.

On motion, thanks were tendered to Mr. A. S. Barnes, General Hall, Mr. Lutkemeyer, Mr. Harrison and others for their kind assistance, which was carried.

Councilman Dean presented a programme of the exercises at the Crystal Palace, which was accepted.

Mr. Lawson stated that it was the wish to call on boats as much as they could carry of the remnant of the cable, about 10 miles of it on each truck, and a motion to that effect was carried. It was not stated how many trucks would be so employed.

The Committee then adjourned to next day.

THE YOUNG MEN'S DEMOCRATIC UNION CLUB AND THE CABLE CELEBRATION.

This association met, Friday evening, at the Mercer House, C. L. Van Zandt, Esq., in the chair; Mr. C. J. Kenny officiating as Secretary. The Committee of thirteen previously appointed, with power, to prepare for a suitable celebration with the public authorities, of the success of the Atlantic Telegraph enterprise, did not report. It was moved that a sub-Committee of three be appointed to make arrangements for a Serenade to Mr. Cyrus W. Field, and Captain Hudson, of the Niagara, on their arrival, which was carried, and Mr. L. F. Harmon, H. B. Lamarche and F. H. Cavanaugh were appointed such Committee. The Club then adjourned, subject to the call of the General Committee.

The Inventor of the Paying-out Machinery for Laying the Telegraph Cable.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On perusing the leading article of the Times of the 7th, under the words "Sunum Cuique"—which, by the way, I'll ink to be the most calm and sensible article upon the great event, perhaps of the century, which has met my eye—I perceive that while giving great and deserved praise to Messrs. Whitehouse, Bright and Bailey for the skill and sound judgment displayed by them in the construction of the cable, the experiments connected therewith, and the machinery, and in laying down, you have omitted to mention the name of Mr. W. Everett, U. S. N., the engineer to whom, as I am informed, is due the especial credit of the invention and construction of the new "Paying-out Machinery" which was used in the late successful voyage of the Niagara and Agamemnon.

This machinery, as I understand the matter from what I consider an authentic source, was invented and constructed by Mr. Everett at the express request of the Directors of the Telegraph Company, after the failure in 1857 of the old machinery erected by Mr. Bright.

Mr. Everett was granted leave of absence by the Navy Department upon the request of the Company—he having been Chief Engineer attached to the Niagara in 1857—for this purpose, and proceeded to England, and there constructed the present successful "paying-out machinery," to which, I think is due, under the blessing of Providence, the laying of the Transatlantic Telegraph Cable.

It seems to me but just that when all those connected with the cable, from its initiation to its final success, are honorably and properly mentioned, the inventor of praise due to our countryman, Mr. Everett, for his scientific, strenuous and finally successful exertions in the cause should not be withheld in the columns of the Times.

Respectfully yours, Americus.

How Mr. Field Received the News.

The Springfield Republican tells the following:

"The Rev. Dr. Field, of Stockbridge, having heard the rumor of the telegram, which was sent to his son Dudley, could not credit it, until he had gone to see the dispatch for himself. This, with Cyrus' name subscribed, satisfied him. Although nearly eighty years old, a score seems to have been lifted off his steps on his return, and passing a group of boys about the common, he exclaimed, 'Now, boys, fire away!'"

An Indignant Churchman—Jews not fit Associates for Christians.

The New-York Churchman of this week contains the following curious diatribe:

"The 21st of July, 1858, will long be remembered in England, and throughout the world; will be long remembered to England's shame and disgrace! One can hardly believe that Christian England had really invited to a seat in her highest councils one who, if Jesus Christ were now on this earth as He was eighteen hundred years ago, would cry, 'Crucify Him! crucify him! Not this man, but Barabbas!' Think of it: Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England hobnobbing with a Jew—consulting with a Jew in making laws for a Christian country! Can it be so? It is verily; and we record it with shame and sorrow, because as Americans and Churchmen we cannot forget that England is our mother!

England has given the lie to her high profession, and now presents herself before the world as a mere whited sepulchre. All her boasted Christianity has turned out to be a mere sham, the alliance thus formed with the enemies of Christianity—with the Jews, who crucified our Lord and Saviour, proves it to be a sham.

In a worldly point of view, we can respect the Jew far more than England. The former is consistent, the latter is not. Did the Jew, for the sake of gaining a seat in Parliament, turn traitor to his religion? Did he deny his profession? No! He denounced Christ and Christianity, by refusing to take the prescribed oath. And yet, England allows the Jew to join in her councils and make laws for a professedly Christian people: and thus England turns traitor to her religion, and—shall we write it?—lays herself open to the gravest of all charges—having crucified her Lord afresh!

We have neither time nor space to go into a minute description of what we regard to be a consistent Jew, or a consistent Christian; and indeed if we had, it were not necessary with such a striking illustration as the simple facts before us afford. We may ask, however, are they not sufficient to demonstrate the superiority of a consistent Jew, whose practice conforms to his creed, that there is only one God, Jehovah, over the inconsistent Christian, who, professing to believe in the religion of Christ, yet, in his practice, does that which, if it could, would overthrow Christianity?

Was there ever beheld a more humiliating spectacle than that of the proudest and most powerful nation on the face of the earth, and the one which claims to present an example of piety worthy of being imitated by all other nations; such a nation, with such claims and with such pretensions, kneeling at the feet of a Jew—of a Jew, who, consistent with his own creed, denounces England's creed! Who would have supposed that any nation, however humble it might be in its pretensions, could ever be guilty of such a degrading piece of double-dealing? Are we not, as a Church, disgraced by this unjustifiable conduct of our mother? Shall we not, at least, protest against it?

Let the Bishops who were members of the House of Lords, be held responsible for this outrage. Was it not consummated either by their inaction or connivance? Where is their united protest against this act? The Church of England must answer for this iniquity, until her Bishops come forward, and, if they can, clear their own skirts. If we mistake not, here is an example of the most telling character, of the results of the adulterous connection of Church and State; and even upon the supposition that the Church, through her Bishops in the House of Lords, protested against the act, of which, however, we have no proof, it is by no means the first instance of the exercise of power over the Church by the State; and if that unholy alliance continues, it will not be the last.

A most outrageous act of national treachery to the cause of Christ and His Church has been consummated, and the wrath of God hangs over England and England's Church. Time will reveal the truth or falsity of our position. We do not hesitate to express our conviction that the Pope of Rome, in his efforts, a few years ago, to form a sort of alliance with his Greek Church through the instrumentality of the Emperor Nicholas, was more consistent than England or England's Church has shown herself to be in the case before us. Here she is courting the Jew, and forming an alliance with his monied influence. We cannot resist this impression, whether it be strictly true or not, and thus the world will judge till it knows to the contrary. England's inconsistency is now all the more glaring when viewed in connection with another alliance which has existed for a considerable period between her and France, for the purpose of retaining in their own hands what is called the balance of power. Thus they hope to keep the despotism of Russia and her (Greek) Church in obeyance.

We are not a prophet, but we predict that England's alliance with the enemies of her Church and of her adorable Lord, will come to a violent end, and how soon we care not, if it severs the connection between Church and State. Our prayer to God is, that He may bring the Church of England out of bondage; and events certainly point to a possibility of its being accomplished by the outpouring of his wrath on that nation and its Church too,—because the measure of their iniquity is nearly full.

Attack on a Newspaper Office.

The Baltimore Patriot of Thursday has the following particulars of the attack upon the office of the Exchange, reported yesterday by telegraph:

"About 11 o'clock this morning considerable excitement was created in the neighborhood of the corner of Baltimore and North streets, by an attack upon the office of the Exchange newspaper. A party of rowdies, some five or six in number, entered the counting room, and demanded of the clerk, Mr. Edward T. Carter, a copy of yesterday's paper. They were informed that no copies of that issue were left, but were politely handed the office file to look over. One of the party, James, alias Tobe Madison, then pointed to an article, and asked the name of the author, and on being informed by Mr. Carter that he did not know, immediately assaulted that gentleman, by striking him a blow with his fist. Mr. Carter retreated towards the wall of the room, followed by Madison, with a drawn revolver in his hand. A young man named Henry Wharmby, who was behind the counter, raised the alarm, and jumped out of the window fronting on North-street, not, however, before he had received one or more blows and kicks from the companions of Madison, who did not fail to back up their leader.

Captain Joseph Mitchell, of the Middle District, who was fortunately in the neighborhood, rushed in, and at much peril succeeded in arresting Madison and taking him to the office of Justice Merrins, where in a few moments he was released on bail in the sum of $500 to keep the peace. There being no charge at that time against him, other than disorderly conduct, the Justice, it is said, could not hold him. Whilst Madison was in the act of assaulting Mr. Carter, his brother desperadoes amused themselves by destroying the office furniture, which to a certain extent they did effectually.

As soon as Mr. Carter could recover from the effects of the assault, he proceeded to the Court and had bench warrants issued for the arrest of all the parties, which we trust will be speedily effected. The cause of this outrageous conduct is said to be certain articles which have appeared in the Exchange, recently, reflecting severely upon the parties and their friends.

A large crowd continued in the neighborhood of the office all the morning. A little before 1 o'clock an individual known as Bun Coulson stopped in front of the office, and was in the act of making a demonstration when he was arrested by Officers Roth and Sherer. He was taken to the Central Station, where he, too, will doubtless undergo the farce of being released on bail to keep the peace.

We cannot close this paragraph without speaking in the highest terms of the conduct of Captain Mitchell. He deserves and will receive the commendations of his fellow-citizens for his brave and prompt action upon the occasion. He was slightly bruised in his efforts to arrest Madison.

Since writing the above we learn that another arrest has been made. Captain Mitchell has captured Paul Placide, one of the party who entered the office and he is now, together with Coulson, confined in the Station-house.

John T. Ford, Esq., who is acting as Mayor in the absence of Mayor Swann, was promptly upon the spot, and by his orders the arrest of the last two parties were made. The arrest and release of Madison occurred before he had reached the scene of outrage. Mr. Ford has ordered a body of the police to be in attendance around and about the office, with instructions to arrest any and all parties who may seem disposed to make a second attack. As far as he is concerned, the most vigorous efforts to arrest the remainder of the party will be made."

The following is the account of the occurrence given by the editor of the Exchange, together with an explanation of the circumstances which led to the assault:

"In the Exchange of yesterday a brief allusion was made to the fact that one John English, a notorious character familiarly known to the police annals of this city, formerly as a frequent transgressor of the laws, but more recently as a disreputable member of the police corps, had visited our counting-room, and professed great dissatisfaction at the publication of a report of his riotous and turbulent behavior, during the recent excursion of the steamboat Lancaster to the village of St. Michael's, had left a written form of retraction of all that had been said about him.

We also adverted, although in the same cursory manner, to the threats made by Officer English of what he would do in the event of non-compliance with his demands. On yesterday events transpired which proved that those threats were no unmeaning menace. About the hour of eleven in the forenoon, our counting-room was invaded by a gang of notorious ruffians and outlaws, long the terror and the curse of this community, who after unsuccessfully demanding, as Officer English had done before them, the name of the reporter who had furnished to this paper the obnoxious article, proceeded without further ado to make an indiscriminate attack upon persons and property in the office. Our furniture was broken, and our books and papers hurled about in every direction. Our book-keeper, Mr. Edward F. Carter, formerly of the American office, a gentleman well-known and widely respected in this community, was violently assaulted, was struck and kicked, and pistols pointed at him with an exhortation on the part of the leader of the gang, to his fellows, to shoot. A lad, named Wharmby, employed in our office, barely escaped similar or worse treatment by leaping from the window. Mr Wm. B. Muse, a gentleman of thirty, in nowise connected with this paper, but who happened accidentally to be in the office at the time, received a severe blow on the forehead from a ruffian named Madison, who presented a pistol to his breast, and was only prevented from shooting, by the timely arrival and prompt interposition of Captain Joseph Mitchell, of the Police, to whom, under God's Providence, both Mr. Muse and Mr. Carter are probably indebted for their lives. When we add to these facts, sufficiently indicative in themselves of the character and magnitude of the outrage committed, the additional circumstance, unknown, perhaps, to some of our readers at a distance, that our counter is situated at the northeast corner of Baltimore and North streets, the business centre of the city, the opposite corners being occupied by our neighbors of the Patriot and the Sun, we have said enough perhaps to dispense with the necessity of anything further from us upon the subject of this disgraceful occurrence.

The Coming Prize-Fight.—Since our last, the two high contracting parties have put up an additional $500 a side of the battle-money, and the meeting of the whole $2,500 a side may be regarded as a fixed and settled thing. Indeed, there is but little doubt that were the required amount four times as large, the sum could be easily obtained, so high does the excitement run in circles which promote the fistic ring. Both parties have been very busy in their training; but on Friday of last week the Benicia Boy had a "let up" of two days, and taking advantage of the rainy weather, which prevented him from taking his usual out-door exercise, he took a run to Troy to pay a visit to his friends in that vicinity, before going into the close training that would require him to remain at his quarters on the Bloomingdale Road. While in the neighborhood, he called on Morrissey, at a house kept by the latter, and after passing the usual compliments about the weather, asked about his health, and invited him to take a drink. Morrissey, however, prudently declined, whereupon the trainer who accompanied Heenan quietly took up the glass of sherry that had been poured out for his principal, with the remark, "And I'll drink this for you." Heenan, then, in a spirit of banter, turned to his companion, and expressed himself, loud enough for Morrissey to hear, to the effect, that he expected to have a very easy job on the 20th October. Morrissey, upon this, immediately put his hand in his pocket, and offered to bet $100 to $60, ten times over, that he would whip him in the fight. "I can do better than that," said Heenan, "they say that your friends are offering $100 to $70." "Well," said Morrissey, promptly, "I'll bet $100 to $70—put up!" Heenan, upon this, drew his wallet; but the parties not being able to agree upon a stakeholder, the bet passed by. On the same evening, Heenan returned to the City, and will not leave his training ground again until ready to set out for the fight. Both men are progressing well, though Morrissey seems thus far to have taken the severest work. Each, however, are in about the condition which they ought to be in at this stage of the proceedings, and there is but little doubt that both will appear at the appointed time in the best possible trim.—Porter's Spirit.

The Clipper says "Heenan is under the care of Mr. James Cusick and Joe Coburn, who are unremitting in their attention and care. His private sitting and sleeping apartments are detached from the hotel, and are healthily situated. His usual hour of rising is about half-past four, and of retiring about nine in the evening; and the course of training he has already undergone, has been sufficient to reduce his weight from 216 pounds, (which was his weight when he commenced,) to 196 pounds, and, of course, will be still further diminished by regular and continued exercise. His daily work comprises walking, running, use of the dumb bells, [illegible] sparring, fighting [illegible] bag, &c.; and these varied [illegible] exercises seem admirably adapted for training purposes. [illegible] the pure healthy air inhaled there [illegible] tributes. We were informed that the [illegible] with the exception of a slight eruption around the mouth, (a very common occurrence in the early stage of training,) he is in excellent health, and feels the most perfect confidence of success in the result of the fight."

Fashion Race-Course—Base Ball Match.—A match was played yesterday, at Hyslop's Fields, on the Gotham Ground, between the Nine selected to play on the part of New-York against the Brooklyn Nine, and a picked Nine from the other New-York Clubs. It was a very strongly contested game, and very creditable to both sides. Da Costa excelled his usual style of play. The game stood, at the close, fourteen runs for the Fashion Nine, and nine runs for their opponents. Some changes have been made since the first match was played. The Nine will stand as follows: Da Costa, Davis and Wheaton, of the Knickerbockers; Birney and Gibbons, of the Eagles; Van Cott and Tuthill, of the Gothams; Pinckney, of the Union, and Marsh, of the Harlem. No change is expected, except in the position in the field, in the Brooklyn Nine. The match will be played Tuesday, and, as thousands will be there, it will be well for those who wish to see the contest to comfort to take the early trains.

The Western Cricket Club vs. The New-York Cricket Club.—On Monday week a match takes place on the Hoboken Cricket Ground, between 16 of the best players of the Western Clubs and an 11 of the City of New-York Cricket Club. The Western Clubs beat New-York last year at Albany.

Americans vs. English.—A match has been made up between eighteen Americans and eleven English cricketers, taken from the Long Island clubs. It will come off at Redford the week after next.

Nassau vs. Pastime.—These Clubs play a match at Wheat Hill, Williamsburg, on Monday afternoon.

THE ARMY.

Tribute to the Army of Utah.

Head Quarters of the Army, West Point, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1858.

GENERAL ORDERS, NO. 19.

The General-in-Chief learning of the arrival of the troops under Brevet Brigadier-General Johnston at their destination in the Salt Lake country, after their detention in the valley of Green River during the last Winter, takes occasion to commend them to General Order—as he has already done through their commander—for their exemplary conduct under the trying circumstances in which they have been placed.

Detained, after a long and wearisome march of over a thousand miles, by pauses over which their commander had no control, in a most barren and inhospitable region; subjected—by the rigors of the season, which destroyed or paralyzed their draught animals—to tolls of no ordinary nature; and, on account of the destruction of part of their supplies, obliged to labor with insufficient clothing, indifferent, and often restricted rations of food—this fine body of men, instead of giving way to insubordination, irregularities, or murmurs even, went on improving in discipline and instruction, and discharging their accumulating duties with the utmost alacrity and cheerfulness; and, at the order of their commander, not showing the inhabitants of Salt Lake Valley, as they passed through their settlements, either by act, word or gesture, that they had recently stood towards them in a hostile attitude.

The march—in the depth of Winter—of Lieut-Colonel (now Colonel) P. St. George Cooke, commanding the Second Dragoons from Fort Laramie through the South Pass to Green River; and that of Capt. R. B. Marcy, 5th Infantry, from Camp Scott, over the mountains to New Mexico, deserves, as they have already received, special commendation.

Brevet Brigadier General Johnston has had the honor to be supported by officers of great intelligence, zeal, and experience. Yet it is not to be doubted that to his own high soldierly qualities, untiring exertions, tact and sound judgment, the credit for the condition and high tone of his army is pre eminently due.

By command of Brevet Lieutenant-General Scott

IRVIN McDOWELL, Asst. Adj. Gen.

Doings at the Philadelphia Navy-Yard.—Upward of 1,200 men now constitute the mechanical and laboring forces at our Navy-Yard. The former is composed of 600, consisting of ship carpenters, joiners, blacksmiths, spermakers, sailmakers, gun-carriage makers, caulkers, roamers, oakum spinners, plumbers, boat builders and painters. It is expected that the new sloop Lancaster will be ready for launching about the latter end of September. She has been planked, and the caulkers are now engaged upon her. The frigate Congress is still at the yard. The riggers commenced placing her spars yesterday. The length of the mainmast to the head, near where the first or main yard is placed is 109 feet, and has at the largest part a diameter of 37 inches. As soon as rigged, he Congress will take on board her stores and be ready for sea.

In the frigate-house the keel of the new sloop is being laid. The work upon her will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible, inasmuch as orders have been received for her completion before the next meeting of Congress. The steamer Walker, of the Coast Survey, which we have before noticed as undergoing repairs, will be finished in about three weeks. The schooner Spray, which is under charge of the Light-house Board, is being rebuilt. From the south pier the battery has been removed. It has been placed upon the receiving ship Princeton. The Secretary of the Navy is expected to visit the Yard daily, and everything is in a clean and orderly condition.—Phila. Evg. Journal, Aug. 12.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Shooting in the Seventeenth Ward.

FOUNDED ON A GROCERY.—THE ACCUSED PARTIES IN CUSTODY.—Yesterday morning a German, named Christian Mathewbacker, residing in the basement of No. 10 Avenue A, was found dead in his bed. He had been badly beaten the evening previous, in a saloon in the grocery store No. 20 Avenue A, it was [illegible] supposed by his friends that his death was the result of the violent treatment he had received. The matter was at once noticed, but owing to the absence of material witnesses, the investigation was postponed until to-day. Dr. Ferguson made a post mortem examination of the body, and declared that death was the result of "compression of the brain from blood, the result of injury to the skull from violence." The deceased, as far as can be learned committed no act justifying the violent treatment he received. He was sitting very quietly in the grocery store, and nearly a dozen men and boys were there at the time. Some of the boys got into a quarrel about some trifling matter when Mathewbacker told them to keep quiet. Two young men in the room named Wm. Tillerton and Dennis Crotty were induced of the interference of Mathewbacker, and at once sprang upon him, striking him several times in the face and over the head with their fists. A general row speedily ensued, which ended before word of it reached the Police. After the fight, Mathewbacker went home, and as stated above, was found yesterday morning dead in his bed. Warrants were issued yesterday for the arrest of Tilleston, Crotty and others, but then far none of them have been apprehended. The deceased was a slate-roofer by trade, 45 years of age, and unmarried. He was temperate in his habits, and is reported to have been a very quiet, inoffensive man.

THE BOGUS FORGERY ON FREDRICKS, THE PHOTOGRAPHER.—The late forgeries on Mr. Fredricks, Photographer, in Broadway, are likely to give rise to a tough law suit litigation. The affidavit of Julius A. Gilligan, the young man whose arrest at the guilty party was mentioned in yesterday's TIMES, declares that Mr. Ralph H. Isham, a broker, in Fulton-street, is the principal in the forgery. Mr. Isham was arrested yesterday morning by Officer Devoe, of the Detective Police, just as he was stepping off from the New Haven train at Twenty-seventh street. Mr. Isham was at once apprised of the nature of the charge preferred against him, and he forthwith proceeded with the Officer before Justice Connolly, in the Jefferson Market Police Court. He declined an examination, and his brother, Joseph G. Isham, became bail for his appearance, in the sum of $10,000. Gilligan alleges, in his affidavit, that in April last Mr. Isham called to see him at Bedloe's Island. Gilligan is a recruit in the United States Army, and was stationed there with his regiment, and obtained a furlough from Capt. Stewart, the officer in command. He (Gilligan) came to New-York with Mr. Isham, and went directly to his office, in Fulton-street. Mr. Isham talked over various matters, among other things stating that he must have $20,000, in order to make a payment upon his country place at New-Rochelle. In the course of half an hour he showed Gilligan some bills purporting to have been signed by Charles D. Fredricks, those notes being drawn to his (Gilligan's) order, and requested him to indorse them. Mr. Gilligan did so. It was a mere matter of form, and he thought he would never go out of the hands of himself and brother. Gilligan thought this a rather strange way of doing business, but supposing no harm would come of it, he placed his name upon the back of the notes. He denies having received any pay, beyond a voluntary loan of $20, for indorsing the notes. An effort will be made to make Gilligan, instead of one of the principals in the forgery, a witness against Mr. Isham.

COMMITTING AN ERRAND BOY.—SEVERAL ARRESTS.—About a year ago, Edward F. Dunham, a specimen lad about twelve years of age, was employed as errand boy in the large retail store of Messrs. Lane & Porter, in Canal-street. He had been there but a short time before Cornelius Schelur, who keeps a shop store in Laurens street, near Spring, persuaded him to steal goods from the store, which the boy did, and for week afterwards gave him about one-tenth of their value. From Lane & Porter's, Dunham went directly into the store of Robert F. Smith, No. [illegible] Canal-street. He also stole goods from this store and sold them to Schelur. Robert Ellis, a colored man keeping a dining saloon in Wooster-street, induced the boy to steal goods for him; Mrs. Jane Jenkins, who keeps a small thread and needle store in Mercer-street, engaged the boy to furnish her with some light articles as he could bring away without detection. Mr. Smith becoming suspicious of the boy, had him arrested yesterday, when he boy made a clean breast of it." The implicated parties were arrested, taken before Justice Quackenbush, and in default of bail were locked up to answer. The father of the boy gave bail for his appearance at the trial.

Sea and Ship News.

BURNING OF THE SHIP OSSIONTHE.—The ship Ossionthe, of Boston, lying at the wharf of Messrs. Wm. Cox, taking on board the cargo of the Sultana, was discovered to be on fire between decks on the morning of the 30th inst., at a little after 2 o'clock. Immediately on the alarm being given, our citizens were on the spot and rendered all the assistance they could to clear the ship from the wharf and get her out of danger to the town and into deeper water where she might be scuttled. Very efficient service was rendered by the officers and crew of the United Steamship Dolphin and mail steamer Metagorda. It took over an hour to clear the ship from the wharf—her lines being chain ones and shackled to the wharf, and owing to the confusion and excitement which prevailed, much valuable time was consumed in cutting them and disengaging the ship. At the time the fire was confined to about a hundred bales of cotton stowed between decks. The ship was moored at least 300 feet from shore of the wharf, a line was taken to the ship Bolivar, lying in the stream, and the burning ship was warped out into the channel, when she was taken away in tow by the steamer Metagorda and towed into four and a half fathoms water in the upper part of the harbor, and there scuttled and sunk, she heeled to starboard and remained in that position all day of the 30th, with a gang of men on board trying to extinguish the flames, and those interested in the ship, and others, believed the fire was going out by being smothered, when in reality it was, the ship not having been sunk in sufficiently deep water, taking firm hold on the timbers and decks. This proved to be the case on the morning of the 31st, when the masts fell by the board, and the fire blazed up fore and aft along the spar deck, and burnt on the port side to between decks, and on the starboard side but little. About 1,200 bales of cotton and 6,000 bags of corn were on board at the time of the fire—of which the corn is a total loss, and of the cotton about 100 bales is supposed to have burnt, and the balance badly damaged by water. Various are the conjectures as to the probable cause of this disaster; but all are vague and unsatisfactory, and we may safely say the cause is unknown. The Ossionthe was but five years old, and valued at about $45,000. Yesterday a contract was made with Mr. TITT to raise the vessel and discharge her for $10,000, and to accomplish which one of Palmer's marine pumps was put in requisition, and efforts are now being made to recover what remnant of the vessel and cargo, which will no doubt prove successful.—Key of the Gulf, July 31.

COLLISION ON THE SOUND.—About 1 o'clock Thursday morning, it being somewhat foggy at the time, the schooner Maxwell, from Newport for this City, ran into the sloop Quintet, from Southport. The boats were immediately lowered from the steamer and proceeded to the sloop, when they found a sinking condition, the crew having left the Captain, two seamen and the cook, the latter with his leg broken and otherwise badly injured. Captain Brown, of the Maxwell, states that he gave the sloop and could have towed her in safely, had not the persons on board her injured her course, and by so doing brought down the Maxwell's bows.

The ship Robert Morris, hence for London, while passing down the lower bay yesterday, struck on the Romer Shoal, east side of the West Bank, and was towed off by the assistance of steamboats.

AN OPERA HOUSE FOR BROOKLYN.—A meeting, small in number, but composed of highly respectable citizens, was held in Musical Hall, on Thursday evening, the object of which was to devise means to erect an Opera House in Brooklyn. Mr. GEORGE F. H. Yerres occupied the Chair, and remarks appropriate to the occasion were made by Messrs. A. J. SPOONER, RODMAN B. DAWSON, EDWARD T. WOOD, and Col. T. B. THORPE.

The following resolutions were passented by ALBERT J. SPOONER, Esq., and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, As the sense of this meeting, that the time has arrived when the city of Brooklyn, with a population of 250,000 people, should have places of refined and refining public entertainment; that music has always been a great resource and reliance of the people, and we think the time has arrived for an ample Hall competent to the production of opera and concerts of the highest order of ability.

Resolved, That a Committee of twenty be appointed by the Chair to consider the subject, to report at a future meeting to be called by them:

The following is the Committee: A. A. Low, John Greenwood, Luther B. Wyman, Rodman B. Dawson, J. M. Van Cott, Wm. F. Brough, Col. T. B. Thorpe, Carl Prox, H. E. Mathews, Dr. John D. Conckling, Wm. C. Cox, Edward T. Wood, Edwin B. Spooner, Henry Hill, R. B. Duryea, W. Davidge, John E. Conover, Nicholas Luquer, S. B. Chittenden, Robt. Sherwell.

A BAGGAGE MASTER KILLED ON THE LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.—On Thursday afternoon, MICHAEL DOYLE, baggage master on the 4 o'clock train of the Long Island Railroad, while endeavoring to uncouple two cars at Hempstead, fell upon the track between them and the wheels of one passed over his legs crushing them in a shocking manner. He was immediately taken to the Long Island Hospital, Brooklyn, at which place he arrived about 9 o'clock, P. M., and expired within 5 minutes after his admission. He was 25 years old and leaves a widow with one child.

CORONER REDDIE held an inquest yesterday when the jury exculpated the officers of the train from all blame.

A CAUTION TO CARMEN.—Three New-York carmen, named JAMES MCNALLY, O'DONNELL, and JOHN SMITH, were arrested by Hack Inspector SPRONE yesterday, for carting in Brooklyn without a license. They were taken before Justice VOORHIES and fined $10 each, which they paid and departed.

THE COUNTERFEITERS.—The counterfeiters who give their names as ALLEN and COLLINS, arrested for passing counterfeit $5's on the National Bank, Providence, were yesterday brought before Justice VOORHIES, and committed in full for trial. Their bail was fixed at $3,000 each, but this they have not as yet obtained.

RESCINDED.—The resolution adopted some months ago by the Kings County Board of Supervisors, requiring all Committees to report at each meeting when and where all committee meetings are held was, at the last meeting of the Board, on motion of Supervisor CAMPBELL, re-considered and rescinded.

POCKPOCKETS IN THE COUNTRY.—Officer ELIAS, of the First Precinct, Brooklyn, on Thursday last, while at East New-York on a pleasure excursion, arrested a pickpocket, just after the latter had stolen a gentleman's wallet, and handed him over to the authorities of Queens County. The thief was tried the same day and sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—A man named PATRICK COSLEY, a cooper, residing at the corner of South and Wyckoff streets, while intoxicated, yesterday morning, attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself. His wife cut him down just in the nick of time, and sent him to prison.

THE LATE CHILD BURNING.—The child of Mrs. MANNING, corner of Columbia and Pacific streets, who was burned to death in a cradle, during the temporary absence of the mother, Wednesday last, the Coroner's Jury say, died from the effects of fire communicated to its clothing by some person to them unknown.

NO LONGER MISSING.—Miss EMMA SANDERSON of No. 29 Dean-street, who, as we mentioned yesterday, left her home last Tuesday, and had not since been heard of by her parents, was found at the house of a lady in Brooklyn, yesterday, safe and sound.

FOUNDLING.—A female child, about 3 months old was found in the hall of No. 31 Fulton street, Thursday night. It was sent to the Alms-house.

Brooklyn Police.

BROOKLYN, Friday, Aug. 13, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As your paper has, perhaps, a larger circulation than any other in the city of Brooklyn, will you permit me a portion of your space to draw attention to what seems to me an abuse of power, of which notice should be taken, and that is the displacement of patrolmen from their legitimate beats, by Captains of Precincts, and the substitution of men unacquainted alike with the localities and the dishonest and suspicious characters.

The Eleventh Ward, in which I reside, is a late case in point. That Ward is the largest in population and next to the largest in area of any in the city. It, with the Seventh, forms the Fourth Precinct. The Police force we have heretofore had, since the present organization, was composed of men who, almost all of them, have resided in the Ward for the last ten to twenty years, and they have been remarkably active and attentive to their duties, have made many arrests, some of them very important ones, and are reliable men, well acquainted with the persons, the habits, and the haunts of the dangerous and depraved. They have now, by the dictum of the Captain, been sent in a body to the Seventh Ward, with which they are comparatively unacquainted, the extremes of the two Wards being two miles apart, and the Seventh Ward men, equally unacquainted with the Eleventh, have, in a body, been detailed for duty there. Comment is unnecessary.

ELEVENTH WARD, BROOKLYN.

NEW-JERSEY.

Where's the Police?

JERSEY CITY, Friday, Aug. 13, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is undoubtedly a very fine thing to have a large Police force in a city to protect life and property, but unfortunately, in that large town just over the river from here, policemen are never to be found when wanted. For instance, this morning I happened to be crossing from New-York to Jersey City, at about 7½ o'clock, just as the passengers were beginning to arrive for the morning Philadelphia train. Just behind me was a countryman, with his baggage, evidently looking for the ticket office. Two well-dressed men immediately stepped up to him, asked him where he was going and told him that he would find the ticket office just across the way, and would probably have shaved him out of considerable had I not known the true status of the case, and taken him into the real office. For this act, I of course incurred the wrath of the sharks, and would most likely have received a pounding at their hands, had it not been so near the ferry, where I am well known. One fellow threatened me and followed me some distance towards the gate, and when I wanted an officer to have him arrested, there was none to be found, although I looked all over the premises for one. Now, wouldn't it be advisable to have at least one policeman stationed there all the time, to keep people from being swindled? For, from what I saw this morning, I am sure that there is any amount of it done there.

Truly yours, STRONG.

FRIDAY, Aug. 13—P. M.

The rates for Money, loaned at call, are 3@4 ℘ cent. on Federal and State Securities, and 4@5 ℘ cent. on other approved collateral. And on short mercantile bills the terms of Discount are 4@5 ℘ cent., and on bills having over 90 days to run, 5@6 ℘ cent. The employment of money has improved much less this week than was anticipated from the absorption by the Federal Loan, and the consequence is, that on this particular stock there is more offered on low rates of interest than is wanted. In reference to Discounts, the only change we observe on the Street is a closer discrimination in favor of short bills, a good many of the Bank officers holding to the belief that better interest will be had as the season advances. The additional transfers of Gold from Bank to the Sub-Treasury to day, on account of the Loan, amount to $1,195,121. The re-sales of the Loan to-day, of which we are advised, are $100,000, taken for London at the equivalent of 105.82 ℘ cent, or 103⅞ interest from next January. $5,000 at 104, ex-interest, deliverable in a week; $2,000 at 104, ex-interest, at the first session of the Board of Brokers, and $5,000 at second session, at 103⅞ ℘ cent, ex-interest, equal to 105.82 per cent.

The Exchange Market for the steamship Vanderbilt is steady on London at 109½@109⅞, and on Paris, 5.12½@5.11½. The Star of the West from Aspinwall, delivered the California gold remittance of July 20 this morning, amounting to $1,531,114. The export demand continues moderate, and the Banks will have the benefit of this remittance for a week or more. The following is the summary of the Bank movement in the four principal cities to the close of last week:

The balance in the Sub-Treasury, since Saturday, to the close of business this afternoon, has been increased to $12,649,165. Of the difference, $7,095,688, it may be assumed that the Banks have transferred about $5,500,000 in addition to the help from California.

The Stock Exchange is higher than yesterday, and the tone of the dealings is materially improved on the Share list. New-York Central from 76⅞ at the close yesterday, advanced to 77⅞ ℘ cent; Erie is in demand at 16⅞, buyer 30 days, and 16⅞@⅞ cash; Rock Island closes 74⅛@⅞ ℘ cent., and for Reading there is a strong demand at 48@48⅛ ℘ cent. the buyers disposed to make contracts 10@30 days option to the seller, about as cheap as the cash stock. The coal tonnage, this week, notwithstanding the transfer of the business of prominent coal merchants of this City to the canal, is 37,400 tons, or within 600 tons of the Bull estimate for the week, put forth a fortnight ago. The recovery in Central and Erie Shares is partly the result of a current rumor that the belligerent managers are about to come together to settle the untoward difficulties existing between them. We do not know what degree of faith is to be reposed in this rumor, but it has its influence from the fact that such an insane quarrel ought to be settled. The unsecured Bonds of the Erie Company improved 1 ℘ cent. The '71's are selling at 31 ℘ cent., from which is deducted the value of the overdue coupons, 7 ℘ cent, making the present cost only 24 ℘ cent. The State Stocks and most of the Railway Bonds actively dealt in at the Board were steady. The general market left off steady at the advance on the Share List noticed above.

The Cleveland Herald reports of the annual meeting of the shareholders in this line:

"Mr. ALBERT KIRKY remarked that one side of the account appeared to be credited with $500,000 in Sunbury and Erie stock, whilst the other side exhibited a charge of $400,000 Sunbury and Erie bonds. The bonds will have to be paid, whilst the stock will probably not sell for $100,000. There should be a deduction made in the account for this probable loss, and, if so made, the police surplus which shows in the financial statement would be absorbed.

Mr. TAYLOR asked if the Sunbury and Erie stock is worth anything at the present time.

Mr. ALBERT KIRKY said he did not know that it was worth ten cents on the dollar. Had it rested with him the purchase would never have been made.

Mr. WM. CASS said that by the terms of the charter the stock cannot be sold until after the roads become one, which is twenty years from this date, or eighteen years from the present time. Whether for good or evil, we must hold on to the bonds until that time.

Mr. ALBERT KIRKY stated that at least five per cent. of the amount should be laid aside annually to [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. R. B. Blume said that the Sunbury and Erie Railroad would, in twenty years, be a valuable investment. When completed it will be an important connection to Philadelphia.

A sharp altercation followed between Mr. A. KIRKY and some of the directors relative to the purchase by the former of the Franklin Canal Railroad, and the claim growing out of it, during which Mr. KELLY stated that the claim had been unfairly settled about two months since. After a few other remarks, he said the interests of the stockholders require a change at the head of the management.

Mr. H. B. PAYNE, formerly President of the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati road, said that, as a director, he regretted the differences. No road in the United States is equal to this in value or condition, and no road is so well managed. There was no ground for fear of its coming to bankruptcy. Every director and officer was in favor of retrenchment. No complaint against the officers had ever been made to the Board, and he believed there was no ground for complaint.

Mr. ALBERT STORM, Jr., said he would give some reason why there should be a change of head. The first point was the running of the Connecut train. This train was run at an immense loss, and should be abandoned. From the books of the Company he had made up a statement, showing that for the year ending June 30, the earnings had been $17,229 39, whilst the cost of running he made to be $31,976.

The train should be stopped and the travel accommodated by the other trains, or by a mixed train of passenger and freight cars. There was another point. Cross ties have been taken up in great numbers when perfectly sound, and new ties bought at a higher rate than was necessary, or than is paid by other roads, such as the Cleveland and Pittsburg, for instance. The stock-cars also had been lately built at an increase of three to four thousand pounds weight each, there being no necessity for so doing, and the wear and tear being thus greatly increased. The weight of the engines had been unnecessarily increased, and new engines had been bought of greater weight than were before used, thus greatly enhancing the cost of running the road. The road was operated in a wasteful manner.

There was an outside ticket agency kept up throughout the country at an immense expense, and should be greatly cut down at least. There was much useless expense in the matter of stations. There were also too many hands at the depot, and they received too high pay."

SATTERTHWAITE, in his regular weekly circular, dated London, July 30, says:

"The improvement in American securities we noted last week has made further progress. The market closes very strong at the above quotations. The most marked advance is in Illinois Central, purchasers of large amounts, both of shares and bonds, having come forward."

The Liverpool Times says:

"The English Board of Trade returns for the month of June indicate a rather decided revival of activity in the export trade. It will be remembered that in May, 1858, the total exports were 9 ℘ cent. less than in May, 1857. In June, 1858, the decrease, compared with June, 1857, was only 3½ ℘ cent. The decrease on the six months of 1858, as compared with the six months of 1857, is, however, still 12 ℘ cent. The aggregate of 1858 is about the same as in the corresponding period of 1856. The capacity of absorption of the Indian markets continues unusually large, and that of the American markets exhibits symptoms of revival. The statistics of imports and consumption are generally very satisfactory."
